

Farmers Want Free Market On Livestock

Threatened Controls Opposed in State

Hoosier farmers are up in arms about threatened price controls on live hogs and cattle.

Black markets and subsequent meat rationing are the dire consequences they predicted today if federal stabilization officials carry out the proposed controls.

An official protest, adopted unanimously by the directors of the Indiana Farm Bureau, is now on its way to Hoosier congressmen and the price stabilization officers.

Would Risk Free Market: Bluntly, the farmers say: "We would rather take all the risks of production on a free market than gamble with a government-controlled market."

They pointed out that Indiana farmers already have staked their investments in livestock and feed purchased on a free market, and warned of great losses if controls should be applied.

Hasil H. Schenk, Boone County farmer who is president of the Farm Bureau, said:

"Latest national figures indicate a 6 per cent increase in spring pig production and a 5 per cent jump in the number of cattle now in feed lots.

"This extra meat production, encouraged by free market price conditions, can prevent rationing; while a discouraging, risky, controlled market price situation would eliminate the emphasis on full meat production and thus hasten the day for meat rationing and resulting food subsidies.

"In short, we are strongly opposed to government tampering with or fixing prices for live hogs and cattle or other farm animals. Price ceilings on livestock would endanger the nation's food supply and strength, just when we are mobilizing our might for the defense of freedom."

'Taxpayer' Flips Lip, Slips, Trips And Is Clipped

THE FLIPPAANT lip of an indignant "taxpayer" complaining of poor police service landed him in the cooler today—but good.

Francis Artist, 41, of 2808 N. Euclid Ave., found out his indignation that the police are more efficient than he said.

At 5 a. m. today, Artist labored the ear of Lt. Jack Small, police dispatcher, with profane comments on the lack of police service.

He made a rendezvous with police at North and West Sts.

There he charged that he had been beaten up and robbed in an all-night restaurant at 305 W. Vermont St. A check revealed that the proprietor had tossed him out after Artist allegedly created a disturbance.

SO THE police took Artist in, charged with drunkenness. Routine check of fingerprints revealed that Artist had been wanted since Sept. 7, 1949, on an affidavit charging him with assault and battery with intent to rape a 14-year-old girl.

He had never been arrested on the old charge.

He is now.

Bill Collector Beaten In 3d Floor 'Hellhole'

A bill collector was beat up on the third floor of a "hellhole" last night at 15 N. West St.

The house came under investigation 10 days ago by health authorities when it was learned that 33 people, 11 of them children, lived in 19 rooms with only two baths.

Edward Stenger, 48, of 3041 Stuart St., went to the third floor to collect a bill from Boyd Napier. When he got there, police said Napier attacked him, choked him and knocked him to the floor.

Napier was charged with premeditated battery with intent to kill. Mr. Stenger was treated and released at General Hospital.

Vice Squad Makes Haul on Lottery Books

A police vice squad garnered 60 books of lottery tickets, a package of "hit" books and a package of rundown sheets last night in a cigar store raid at 711 W. St. Clair St.

Andrew "Big Perk" Perkins, believed to own the store, came in while the raid was in progress, police said.

He demanded to be shown the "hit" books before they were confiscated, saying he would have to pay excessively to customers who held winning tickets unless he knew the amount of payoff on each "hit," according to police.

authority. This provision was deleted by the Senate.

The Governor also killed House Bill 17 which would have permitted the clerks of Elkhart and Delaware Counties to retain control of voter registration instead of setting up bi-partisan registration boards.

The bill sought to increase the population limit mandating the creation of the registration board in any county from the present 80,000 to 95,000.

The other bills killed by the Governor's pocket veto were:

House Bill 302—Splitting the present joint circuit court for Perry and Spencer Counties into two courts.

House Bill 323—Limiting Muncie to one justice of peace instead of three as at present.

House Bill 346—Raising salary of justice of peace in South Bend to $3600.

Senate Bill 191—Raising salary of P. Wayne justices of peace to $3600.

The Governor made no comment in killing these six bills.

Vetoed 4 Others

Earlier the Governor had vetoed four other bills. One of them—Senate Bill 56 to open welfare records to the public—was passed over his veto.

The other 320 measures passed by the legislature either were signed by the Governor or permitted to become law without his signature.

One of the unsigned laws calls for a "little Hoover" commission to make a two-year study of overlapping functions of government and recommend more efficient reorganization.

Decline to Sign

The Governor declined to sign the bill because it would have been "a direct reflection on the high office of Lieutenant Governor and the present occupant of that office."

The GOP-controlled legislature had given John Van Ness, Republican pro tem of the Senate, the power to appoint four members of the commission instead of giving that right to the Senate presiding officer, Lt. Gov. Watkins.

Four other members of the commission are to be named within 60 days by W. O. Hughes, GOP Speaker of the House. The Governor appoints the other two members.
