Shoe Fit Important To Growth

MANY foot defects among early school-agers stem from the fact that mothers don't know enough about proper fitting.

Since different children develop differently, it isn't possible to make specific rules applicable to everyone. However, it is important to concentrate on accurate shoe fit that leaves room for growth, taking care that soles are of flexible leather so that they provide sufficient support and ventilation.

OTHER POINTS to keep in mind when dealing with "special" problems are: Is your child large for his age? Remember that bones and muscles develop according to his age, not his height. Therefore, the strength of his foot may be lagging behind his size. For that reason, he will need lightweight soles, with leather soles of more than normal pliability.

Perhaps the child is small for his age but with foot bones and muscles more maturely developed. He will take a sturdier shoe than the boy or girl, of average height.

A CHUBBY CHILD has a predisposition to weak feet because of the extra weight. In order to prevent cramping of muscles, his shoes should have plenty of spread room at the toes.

An underweight youngster generally has a long bony foot whose ligaments tend to looseness and flaccidity. Since such feet elongate easily, it is necessary to measure the size in a standing position.

Wise selection at an early age insures the child against foot ailments later on.

A Tasty Flavor

A teaspoonful of bitters mixed into a cup of tartar sauce, lemon-butter sauce, mayonnaise or bottled cocktail sauce gives shrimp, oysters, crabmeat or lobster "chunks" a delightfully different and unusual flavor.

CLASSROOM PARTNERS—The corduroy weskit, priced at $2.98 at the Star Store, can be worn with plaid skirts and over simple dresses. Box pleats accent the matching corduroy skirt, for $3.98 and the white blouse cost $1.98.

Suits Popular With Younger Set

Softly the suit—seen in today's young-set fashions with very short jackets, beautifully detailed. The suit has many faces, from textured wool tweeds to smooth velvet.

New fabrics which have wide popularity for children's suits, both girls' and boys', are the plaid rayon worsteds and the rayon flannels, both practical and wearable.

Turkey a Big Hit

Midget-sized frozen turkeys weighing from 5 to 10 pounds are making a big hit. Our favorite dressing for these tender, plump, broad-breasted birds is a fluffy bread crumb mixture with a minced apple and a can of chopped ripe olives added along with the usual onion and seasonings.

ANTI-FREEZE—A surcoat of rayon and nylon cavalry twill has a gray dyed mouton collar, deep pockets and full belt. Priced at $16.98, it can be purchased at Ayres' Downstairs Children's Store.

Stole Gives Costume Look

Show-off—that's the young Miss with a stole. Designers intended it that way. Plaid, tweed and plain stoles are put on young shoulders, sometimes shaped like a cape, or again in the fabric of the dress to be worn or not, as fancy dictates.

It gives a costume look to an otherwise simple grade school dress or a tailored skirt. It's the fun piece for the lovely lady of tomorrow.

Jonathan Jennings Chapter to Meet

Mrs. Howard T. Griffith, 5750 N. Pennsylvania St., will be hostess at 1 p.m. tomorrow for the meeting of the Jonathan Jennings Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution.

Guest speaker will be Mrs. Lawrence Dorsey, a member of the Indianapolis Women Voters League speakers' bureau. Mrs. Dorsey will talk on "We, the Women."

Macaroni Gains Favor

Our fondness for macaroni, spaghetti and egg noodles has increased 15.4 per cent this past year and is still on the upswing, which means Americans now enjoy eating eight pounds of macaroni products per person instead of the five pounds they averaged 10 years ago.
