TV Does More Than Entertain

By Harold Hartley

TELEVISION GOT off on a fast track. It's fun, and free.

You pay for the set, and the upkeep, but that hotsy-totsy who wiggles her ruffles in your living room, doesn't cost you a dime.

The whole TV business is simply the old-time medicine show in modern dress. They entertain you to get your happy eye. Then they slip you the sell talk.

# #

AND GODFREY, Berle, Gary Moore, and the rest are doing barkers' spiels, on a higher plane, but in the same vein, as the boys along the Midway at the State Fair.

But TV's biggest job is probably not entertainment. The other stuff is kept quiet because it is television at work, not play.

They use it in guided missles, robot planes, jet engine studies, and for undersea work where man can't stand the weight of the water.

# #

DU MONT Laboratories, a front-runner in the see-and-hear field, has rigged up an outfit which lets men work with highly radioactive materials without risk.

This is just the beginning. They use TV in plants to see around corners, look into white hot furnaces, for education and science. They even peek inside hot volcanoes where man has never seen before.

# #

AND THE DAY may not be far off when groceries will be delivered again.

That will come when your telephone is equipped with a TV screen and you can talk two ways to the store clerk, or the grocer.

Dreaming?

Not at all. This stuff is actually possible now.

# #

And that, of course, is how we got television.

Our Best Buy

IT IS AMAZING how little education costs, and the fuss we make about it.

Actually the only difference between the bearded cave man and the graduate engineer, the doctor or executive, is simply learning.

It used to be handed down by word of mouth. Now we put it in books and laboratories.

# #

AND after a student can show a certain amount of understanding of the world around him, he gets a diploma which he looks at once with pride, shows it to the family, then seldom sees it again.

Basic education, that's the crust which holds the pie of knowledge together, costs only $240 per pupil in public schools in Marion County. Over the state, the Indiana C. of C. reports, it costs $219, still dirt cheap.

SOMEWHERE people have got the idea that education, like air, is free. And it does seem that way to some, but it has payroll and plant, just as any other enterprise.

My point is that if we ever get where we're aiming, toward peace for all mankind, it can come only through the detailed understanding of the world and, most important, the people in it.

# #

EDUCATION, on the common level, for what it does, still is our best investment, and gives us more for less than anything I know.

Most of us dribble $240 a year out of our pockets for things which don't do us, or anyone else, any good.

Armchair Journey

I'VE BEEN WANTING to tell you about De Witt Brown.

I met him while I was playing gin rummy with an insurance man who had one hand in my pocket.

De Witt Brown is quiet, somewhat scholarly in manner, with a touch of a worldly gloss, a man who has been around.

He has several companies. But the one he runs outright, I am told, is the U. S. Wirebound Box Co. But he is not a man who gets lost in piles of correspondence, and worries his way through life.

HE GETS AROUND. He has made two trips around the world. Then he did something superb. He wrote it all down, not in flowered and fussy language, just plain, straight everyday Amercian.

I have before me the copy of his book, "Strange Latitudes," on his second trip which went "down under" to Aukland and Australia, up through the Singapore Straits, to Bombay, then Ethiopia, Cairo and Madrid, up to London, Glasgow and back ot New York.

# #

IT IS HIS language which fascinates me. You understand it. This line about the Fijis, "Now coming in sight of the main and largest island (Viti Levu). High mountains in the center—here and there sand reefs surrounding them at various distances.

"The ocean is deep blue, clouds hovering over the mountain top, entire islands are various shades of green. Thatched native homes."

# #

IT'S LIKE THAT. He tells about the "flame tree" and predicts that the Fijis will rob Miami of the tourist take if enough people ever find out about it "only three easy, pleasant air jumps from Chicago."

And how the dock strike tied up New Zealand, and a ride in a 1939 Dodge in Australia with 600,000 miles on the speedometer. And he passed a 1926 Essex, still going strong.

# #

THE BURIAL rites of Bali. The bandits of Malaya, and the bird nest soup of Singapore. And the bicycle barber shop in the East Indies with the mirror on the handlebars. Citronella grass.

The rest of it is just like that. The best armchair journey I've had in years. There's spice, too.

If you get your hands on a copy, grab it, take it home, and read it.

Backgrounds

LAST YEAR, which isn't so far, I received a note from my friend Hayes Hollibaugh.

He pointed out something I had noticed for a long time, but had said nothing about.

It's advertising, and the kind of backgrounds they use. He sent me a piece about the Lewyt vacuum cleaner for which he is distributor.

# #

IT WAS WRITTEN by Hicks & Greist, Inc., Advertising, which gave Lewyt vacuum cueaner a pat on the back for not leaning too heavily on gorgeous living room scenes showing beautiful women in evening gowns vacuuming the room, and Tuxedo-clad men standing around with admiring glances.

Lewyt just sells vacuum cleaners which do only one thing. They vacuum clean. Period.

# #

I HAVE NOTICED it in car advertising. The little car in front of the $100,000 home with sailboats on the lake in back.

And Betty Furness, bless her television technique, gets razzed a lot by women for doing the washing in a frilly cocktail dress. Women know better.

Backgrounds are the parsley of advertising. They make anything look better, set up an atmosphere of luxury in which the product will not live when it gets into your home.

# #

WHAT WE FORGET is that we do not get the backgrounds, the swimming pools and luscious lovelies sunning on the diving board, when we buy the car, or the lawnmower.

But when we look at the ads, we see it all. And that makes quite a difference.

I don't go much for backgrounds. I'll take mine bare, and on performance—the products, I mean.

Saved

ALL THE extra help didn't keep their jobs through Christmas in the stores.

At least one quit. It was pressure from home.

She had worked in the summer. And her father had kept tab of her earnings. When she took a job for the holiday rush, he kept adding it to the year's total at the end of each week. Then he told her.

"You'll have to quit. If you work another day, I'll lose you as a tax exemption."

The next week there was a new girl in her place. And the old man had saved himself a few bucks in taxes.

Fewer Exchanges

EXCHANGES ran light this year. And that's good news.

I talked with one woman who runs the exchange desk, and the store handed her seven times the number of cash certificates she usually has on hand for people who bring things back.

# #

BUT INSTEAD of exchanges going up seven times, she told me, they hardly doubled. That's good. And think how easy it will be on your consciences, and your memories.

When you see the giver, you won't have to fudge about it, search your memory for what you took back, when you say "Thank you." You'll still have it.

# #

BUT ONE STORE which sold a few men's pocketbooks at $70 had three of them come back.

The customers said they would rather have the $70, more money and less pocketbook.

Russia's Maxim Litvinov Dies In Obscurity

Welded Tie With U. S. Before War

By United Press.

MOSCOW, Jan. 2—Russia announced today the death of Maxim Litvinov, 75, an "old Bolshevik" comrade of V. I. U. Lenin and chief architect of Soviet international co-operation between two world wars.

The Communist Party organ Pravda, sole newspaper appearing today, said Mr. Litvinov died Monday after a long illness. It said his body would lie in state in the conference hall of the foreign ministry until the funeral later today.

Pravda published a half-column obituary of Mr. Litvinov on its last page, describing him as "an old Bolshevik" and "a prominent diplomat." The dispatch said he had given up active work in the last few years because of severe illness.

Had Been Ambassador

Mr. Litvinov had been out of public life since his retirement as commissar from 1929 to 1939 and a deputy foreign minister in 1946. Before that, he had been foreign Soviet ambassador to Washington from 1941 to 1943.

As foreign commissar, Mr. Litvinov helped the Bolshevik regime gain diplomatic recognition in the chancelleries of the world, win a seat in the League of Nations and generally extend its influence in international affairs.

He also was instrumental in obtaining American recognition for the Soviet government in 1933.

Mr. Litvinov, a thick-set, sandy-haired man, was born Meer Vallach July 17, 1876, in Russian Poland. He changed his name to Maxim Maximovitch Litvinov when he became a revolutionary in 1898.

Lived in London

Until the 1917 revolution he lived in London. It was there he met and married Ivy Low, daughter of a London barrister.

He became commissar in 1929 on the retirement of George Chickerin because of poor health. After Russia joined the League of Nations, Mr. Litvinov became famous for his speeches advocating "collective security," and warning that "peace is indivisible."

He became ambassador to Washington Dec. 6, 1941, and remained until Aug. 22, 1943. In 1946 he retired.

UN Gives in To Reds on POW Swap

By United Press

PANMUNJOM, Korea, Jan. 2—The United Nations agreed today to a Communist demand for the relaese of all war prisoners during an armistice, but only under a complex compromise formula.

The United Nations previously had held out for a straight man-for-man exchange which would have left more than 104,000 of the 116,000 Communist prisoners in Allied hands after all 11,559 Allied prisoners had been released.

The new United Nations proposal provides for the release of all war prisoners and civilian internes held by both sides and also would oblige the Communists to free 30,000 to 70,000 captured South Korean troops inducted into the Red armies.

Promise Answer

The Communists' first reaction was unfavorable. The United Nations Rear Admiral R. E. Libby said he got the impression they thought "it stinks."

But he said he didn't believe the Communists fully understood the formula. He said they agreed to give a fuller answer later in the day.

The second subcommittee working on supervision of a truce made no progress during a 54-minute meeting and also adjourned until 11 a. m. Thursday. It still was deadlocked over the Communist demand for the right to repair and build North Korean airports during a truce.

The United Nations disclosed in the course of the discussion that it had found 16,000 more South Korean troops who had been impressed into the Red army among the 132,000 Communist prisoners whose names were handed the Reds last month. These have been reclassified.

Some 38,000 other Communist prisoners were reclassified as South Korean civilian internees before the 132,000-name list was handed over to the Reds.

Litvinov Held Under Arrest

PARIS, Jan. 2 (CDN)—Maxim M. Litvinov was under house arrest for years before he died.

He was virtually confined to a villa on the outskirts of Moscow and was only allowed to see visitors on rare occasions.

When he did meet somebody he trusted, he was so violently outspoken in his criticism of "that wild man Stalin" that acquaintances feared for his life.

Wings the Professor With Shot in Leg

BIRMINGHAM, England, Jan. 2 (UP)—Chief Eagle Eye, a British circus performer, shot the orchestra leader last night.

The chief, otherwise British sharpshooter Jack Carson, had just leaned back over a chair to shoot from an upside down position a balloon on his pretty partner's head.

The chair collapsed and the rifle went off accidentally. The bullet hit Orchestra Leader James Harrison in the leg. He was taken to a hospital.

Ex-U. S. Steel Chief Dies

NEW YORK, Jan. 2 (UP) — William A. Irvin, former president of the United States Steel corporation, died here yesterday at the Harkness Pavilion of Presbyterian Hospital after a long illness. He was 78.

An outstanding figure in the American steel industry for more than half a century and chairman of the board of trustees for the National Safety Council, he played a prominent role in promoting industrial safety throughout the nation.

He leaves his wife, the former Mrs. Gertrude Whilman of St. Paul, Minn.; four daughters, Mrs. Frank O. Leitzell, Mrs. Herbert A. White and Mrs. Jay G. Stephens, all of Pittsburgh; and Mrs. Edward F. Hirsch of Philadelphia; and one son, William Archibald Irvin of Pittsburgh; 13 grandchildren and six great grandchildren.

Mr. Irvin rose in the "self-made man" and Horatio Alger traditions, starting to work at the age of 11 and eventually heading one of the nation's largest corporations.

When he was 11, his father died, and Mr. Irvin started to work half days, attending school the other half. His schooling ended when he was 13.

He worked successively as a Western Union messenger, telegraph operator for the Pennsylvania Railroad, and assistant freight and passenger agent.

In 1894 he went to work for the P. H. Laufman Co., Ltd., at Apollo, Pa., and was superintendent when the firm was taken over in 1900 by the American Sheet Steel Co. which became a part of U. S. Steel in 1901.

He rose steadily through the ranks in U. S. Steel subsidiaries and was elected president of the corporation in 1932. The giant Clairton, Pa., Irvin Works of the former Carnegie - Illinois Steel Corp. was named for him.

Predict Taft To Win on 'Early Vote'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2 (UP)—Sen. Robert A. Taft's campaign manager said yesterday that the Ohioan's presidential bid has been strengthened by scandals in government and that he now seems certain to win the Republican nomination on an "early ballot."

The claim was made by David S. Ingalls of Cleveland, who said Sen. Taft's cause also has been helped by a growing desire on the part of the voters for the best qualified man to manage the nation's affairs, and a steady rise in Sen. Taft's popularity.

In an obvious jab at backers of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower for the GOP nomination, Mr. Ingalls said the Taft movement is gathering strength all over the country while his opposition is "thin, hesitant and faltering."

Says Opposition Confused

"The opposition camps appear to be confused, demoralized and squabbling," he added. "Repeated attempts to get the (Eisenhower) balloon off the ground have failed and there she sits just where it was a month ago."

Sen. Taft forces consider Gen. Eisenhower the chief threat to the Ohioan's nomination at the GOP convention in Chicago next July, although Gov. Earl Warren of California and former Minnesota Gov. Harold E. Stassen also are avowed candidates.

Taft men are inclined to view Mr. Stassen as a stalking horse for Gen. Eisenhower who might throw any delegates he may win to the General at a critical moment. They believe Gov. Warren considers himself a compromise candidate if an Eisenhower-Taft deadlock should develop.

Other political developments:

ONE: Sen. Estes Kefauver (D. Tenn.) said in New Orleans that he may have "something to say soon" on whether he will seek the Democratic presidential nomination. Kefauver headquarters have been springing up in various states but he still has not said whether he will run.

One Rushville Mayor Locks Out Another

RUSHVILLE, Jan. 2 (UP)—Republican William Winship, sworn in as this city's mayor in New Year's Day ceremonies, couldn't enter his city office today. He had no key.

Democratic Mayor Russell Coons, defeated by Mr. Winship in the fall election, declined to turn over the key and locked both doors of the mayor's office yesterday. Mr. Coons said he wanted to await court action Thursday on his suit which claims Mr. Winship is ineligible because of vote fraud in the Nov. 6 balloting.

Mr. Coons also asked his department heads to remain in power until a ruling is issued by special judge in Rush Circuit court. But the police chief in Mr. Coons' administration surrendered his badge to his successor, under protest.

250 Tugboat Workers Go On Strike

NORFOLK, Va., Jan. 2 (UP)—Some 250 tugboat employees of two Norfolk towing firms went on strike yesterday, tying up shipping on the Norfolk side of Hampton Roads.

Members of the International Longshoremen's Association (AFL) employed by Curtis Bay Towing Co. and McAllister Brothers voted to go on strike at the end of a five-hour meeting with management officials. Terms of the workers' demands have not been disclosed.

Heaviest blow to shipping will hit the movement of coal for export. The Virginian Railway placed an embargo on the mines from which its coal comes. The Norfolk and Western Railway said the strike would affect it seriously, but did not immediately place an embargo on coal.

Coal movement on the Newport News side of Hampton Roads will not be affected, as docking of vessels at Chesapeake and Ohio piers is handled by company tugs.

The work stoppage is not expected to affect any shipments bound for Korea. Most of the export coal tied up by the strike is shipped to England.

Strongly Built, Easy Riding Keynote of '52 Plymouths

"The most gentle ride, the smoothest engine, and the greatest safety built into a car for the lowest price field."

That's the way the 1952 Plymouth will be word-tagged when it makes its official bow in all Plymouth, Chrysler, Dodge and DeSoto showrooms.

The combustion chamber has been re-designed for smoothness, brakes are stronger and longer-lasting, the company announced, and the stylist has been given full sway in both exterior and interior.

The engine will be 97 horsepower with a 7-to-1 ratio, with the synchro-silent transmission, and the brakes are Safe-Guard hydraulics.

The starter has a new "follow-thru," anti-kickout feature for quicker starts in hot and cold weather.

Chrysler is bearing down hard on styling, and lots of visibility with Solex tinted safety glass available at extra cost, and safety-rim wheels, no blow-out wobble.
