

Eleanor's No Rose, Says Billy

NEW YORK, Jan. 5 (UP)—Showman Billy Rose beat a legal tattoo on the barred door of his town house today complaining that his estranged wife, Eleanor Holm Rose, was not taking proper care of his art works.

He also asked in an injunction suit yesterday to be given "free access" to the 15-room, five-story home to entertain his friends and get his winter clothes out of storage.

The Broadway showman was locked out by his ex-swimming champion wife Oct. 11 when she began legal separation proceedings. A hearing on his request for an injunction to get back in was set for Jan. 14.

Mr. Rose claimed Eleanor had stored a $75,000 Rembrandt painting and a priceless collection of Georgian silver in a musty wine closet in the basement.

"Danger of theft of the art collection, which Mr. Rose valued at $250,000 was increased by publicity of his domestic affairs," the plaintiff's lawyer said.

Mrs. Rose was given court permission to live in the house Nov. 30 when Justice Kenneth O'Brien awarded her alimony of $700 a week pending trial of her separation suit.

Filing the injunction proceedings here coincided with an announcement by Attorney Greg Bantz in Los Angeles that Mr. Rose had been investigating his wife's divorce from band leader Art Jarrett in 1937.

Her attorney, Louis Nizer, retorted that any attempt by Mr. Rose to invalidate the 1937 divorce would "not rank among the gracious or decent acts of 1952." The Roses, he said, were married 13 years after the divorce from Mr. Jarrett.

Heads Corn Growers

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Jan. 5 (UP)—Orville C. Redenbacher, Valparaiso, today headed the Indiana Corn Growers Association. He was elected president at the closing session yesterday.

BUTTON DOWN THE HATCHES... Her shape is as warm and alluring as any movie cutie. But beware. In her latest film, "Anne of the Indies," Jean Peters' heart is as cold and black as the most ruthless pirate of them all—Blackbeard. Her acting is an envy to even swashbuckling Errol Flynn. Besides she has feminine charms to keep her drunken crew in hand.

Meat Firms Face Wave Of Walkouts

CHICAGO, Jan. 5—A spokesman for the CIO United Packinghouse Workers Union today predicted a wave of "spontaneous" work stoppages in protest against bogged-down wage negotiations in the meat industry.

He said the walkouts were not authorized by the UPW.

Swift and Armour meat packing plants throughout the country were hit by work stoppages yesterday as thousands of members of the CIO union left their jobs.

It was the second straight day of "spontaneous" walkouts in Chicago.

"The workers are dissatisfied with the progress of wage negotiations and all hell's breaking loose in the industry," the spokesman said.

The executive committee of the union was to meet today, and delegates from 250 locals representing the 80,000 members of the union will meet with the executive committee tomorrow to map strategy. The meetings are closed.

Armour earlier this week offered the UPW a 6-cent hourly wage increase, already accepted by the rival AFL Amalgamated Meat Cutters Union for workers in Armour and Swift.

Snow, Strike Tie Up Toronto Transportation

TORONTO, Ontario, Jan. 5 (UP)—Snow started to choke up city streets today threatening a complete paralysis of public transportation, already crippled by a transit workers strike.

Some 4768 transit workers, members of the A.F. of M. Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees, walked off their jobs yesterday to enforce demands for a 15-cent hourly pay boost. They turned down a transportation commission offer of a five cent hourly increase.

Hoosier Profile

By Joe Allison

J. WESLEY BROWN had three reasons to celebrate Jan. 1, 1952.

First of all, it was just a good time to celebrate—Happy New Year.

Second, it was his seventh wedding anniversary.

And third, he took oath for his first term as city councilman.

No "career" or "professional" politician, Mr. Brown got into the 1951 primary mostly as the result of a South Side Exchange Club pow-wow at which no one knew who the councilmen for the South Side were.

THE QUESTION was who to see to get things done for the South Side, traditional "orphan" of city public works. Someone suggested the councilmen, and when no one knew them, the finger was pointed at soft-talking and industrious "Brownie."

Without consulting Republican party leaders, with no background in practical politics, he filed as a candidate for nomination for councilman.

In spite of the abrupt beginning, he received the blessing of party chieftains and was elected in the GOP sweep which downed incumbent Democrats with a near-record majority.

Like all Republican candidates in the Nov. 6 election, he put in long hours in the hundreds of meetings which helped turn the "solid Democratic" South Side almost into the GOP camp.

When the campaign was over and the battle won, "Brownie" scooted for Minnesota and went gunning for deer.

With "beginner's luck" he bagged a 15-pound buck, a 412-pound animal described by a Minnesota game warden as one of the biggest ever taken from the state.

Once before "beginner's luck" smiled on him. Hanging in a prominent place in the hardware store he owns at 3002 Carson Ave., is a 6-foot, 8-inch sailfish he caught on his first "blue water" fishing trip off Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

The 34-year-old councilman is a native of the South Side and was graduated from Manual High School. He also attended Indiana and Purdue Universities.

HIS FIRST job was with Indianapolis Power & Light Co., where he worked eight years as a draftsman, investigator and special meter reader.

He missed a chance to serve in the Navy during World War II when medical inspectors tripped him up and gave him a second eye test.

The first he had passed with flying colors. (He had memorized the charts.) The second was unexpected, had new charts. Brownie's hopes of sailing the seven seas went sailing out the window.

In 1944 he took a leave of absence from IPALCO to become "temporary" manager of the hardware store he now owns.

"I liked it so much," he says, "I bought it as soon as I could raise the money."

HIS LOVE of the hardware business has cost him another love, however.

Triple Celebration Long to Remember

MR. COUNCILMAN—When not on city business, City Councilman J. Wesley Brown sells hardware.

He gave up the post of scoutmaster three years ago when he found he could not take enough time from business to give members of the troop the leadership he thought they should have.

An Eagle Scout holding the honorary scout camp rank of Minisino, he organized one of the first Cub Scout packs in Indianapolis, now known as Pack 39.

He still is active in Masonic and Shrine affairs, though, and has played trombone in the Murat Shrine band for 12 years.

He is a past Illustrious Master of the Council of Royal and Select Masons and is scheduled to become high priest of the Chapter of Royal Arch Masons.

With his wife, Imogene, and 3½-year-old daughter Peggy Jean, he lives at 1213 Hanna Ave.

Glamor Boy, 'Hopkins' and Atom Expert—

Churchill Brings Along His First Team For U. S. Talks

By ANDREW TULLY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5—Prime Minister Winston Churchill is bringing his first team with him for his confab with President Truman and other U. S. officials.

... Nutsell-wise, his club could be described as consisting of a glamor boy, a British Harry Hopkins and a teetotaling vegetarian.

The glamor boy, of course, is Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, a handsome, 45-year-old British diplomat, who at 54 still has the dolls swooning. His first name is Robert, but he's never used as a soldier; he was a major at 20 in the King's Royal Rifle Corps. After World War I he studied Oriental languages and once made a great hit in Iran by delivering a speech in Persian.

He was kicked the first time he ran for Parliament in 1922 but made it the next year and has held his seat ever since. By the time he was 34 he was under secretary for foreign affairs.

Mr. Eden became foreign secretary in 1935—at the age of 38. But he couldn't go along with Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's policy of appeasement to the Nazis and Fascists, so he quit in 1938. Hitler and Mussolini were delighted.

When World War II broke out—proving young Mr. Eden correct—he stepped back into the government as secretary for the dominions. In 1940 he became foreign secretary again and began a fast friendship with Mr. Churchill.

Mr. Eden was all set to quit because of ill health in 1945 when the Labor Party saved him the trouble by taking over.

So he got a six-year vacation, without pay. One of his two sons was killed while flying with the Royal Air Force in Burma in 1945.

The "Harry Hopkins" of Mr. Churchill's team is Gen. Lord Ismay, 64, minister for commonwealth relations. He got the nickname during World War II when he was Mr. Churchill's No. 1 military brain trust, as head of the prime minister's personal staff and military secretary to the cabinet. Lord Ismay—born Hastings Lionel—is a tall, trim soldier and a great charmer who likes to crack homey jokes with subordinates.

He's a graduate of England's West Point, Sandhurst, and served his apprenticeship fighting the dervishes in Somaliland, East Africa.

He also served in India. In 1936 he was named to the powerful imperial defense committee, becoming its secretary in 1938.

Now for the vegetarian. He's Frederick A. Lindemann, Lord Cherwell. His post in the cabinet is called paymaster general, a funny way to describe the boss of Britain's atomic energy program.

He was known as the "mystery man behind the cabinet" in World War II, when he was Mr. Churchill's personal scientific expert. He developed London's famous barrage balloons and thought up the idea of scattering tin foil from planes to spoil enemy radar reception.

Lord Cherwell, 65, was created the first Baron of Oxford in 1941. He was educated in Germany and once was visiting professor at the University of Chicago.

During World War I, he became a test pilot and took a lot of chances to prove some of his theories. He's a bachelor and plays golf and tennis.

Baby Sitter Given More Mental Tests

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 5 (UP)—Two court appointed psychiatrists began further tests today to determine if baby-sitter Delora Mae Campbell was sane when she strangled 6-year-old Donna Joyce Isbell.

A coroner's jury decided the 16-year-old school girl was "probably criminally responsible" for the murder.

Delora told police she strangled the child with a sock after seeing a "vision" of Donna dead.

Delora attended the inquest yesterday but declined to testify on the advice of Public Defender Elery Cuff. She sat unemotionally while witnesses described finding the baby's body.

Gabby Hayes Vows Revenge On Holdup Men

NEW YORK, Jan. 5—Bewhiskered Gabby Hayes, the two-gun sage of Western movies, vowed revenge today on a pair of city punks who held up his secretary.

The secretary, Helen Kelly, surprised the two men in her rooms on the upper floor of the range philosopher's two-story penthouse.

They took a $500 wrist watch and $100 in cash from her and escaped by a terrace stairway.

Pistol-packing Hayes, who was on the lower floor of the penthouse with his family, was irked at missing a crack at the pair.

Gunmen Sought In Two Holdups

A pair of gunmen with a liking for liquor store holdups today are being sought by police.

Police say they believe the same men robbed the Carrollton Liquor Store, 724 E. 10th St., and the Spot Liquor Store, 1301 E. 10th St., last night.

John Hyland, 67, of 1309 N. Illinois St., told police two men, one armed with a snub-nosed 22-caliber automatic, robbed him of $60 at the Spot Store, where he is night manager.

Robert Carmichael, 31, of 3305 Centennial St., told police the gunman who robbed him of $30 and whiskey at the Carrollton store also was armed with a snub-nosed .22.

For Women

Blackwood on Bridge—Distorted Bid Sometimes Justifiable

TO open one club on Mr. Muzzy's hand is to distort the bidding. It is a justifiable distortion when there is no part score, a "least of all evils" proposition, made so that you will have a convenient rebid over anything partner responds.

For example, suppose you open one heart and partner bids two diamonds. What do you rebid? Certainly not two spades. Your hand is not strong enough. Likewise, a two no-trump rebid would require more strength.

You can't raise partner's diamonds with just the trey, deuce. And your heart suit is not rebiddable. To avoid this dilemma you open one club and now over the expected diamond response, you have a convenient rebid of one heart.

THIS IS ALL very fine. But with an advanced partial it represents unnecessary caution. Mr. Muzzy didn't have to worry about rebids. He should have opened with one heart, his best suit. He could have passed anything his partner bid, short of a force.

In other words, one of the advantages of a good part score is that you don't have to strain to open with a three-card club suit on a hand like Mr. Muzzy's.

AFTER THE club opening and Mr. Dale's spade overall, there was no easy way for Mr. Muzzy and Mr. Champion to get into a heart contract at which they could have made three-odd.

Mr. Dale made one spade, giving Mr. Muzzy a minus score on the hand. And if Mr. Champion had stretched a point and raised to two clubs, it would have been even a larger loss.
