

Heart Stops Almost 2 Hours—

$32 Homemade Gadget Gives Death Bum's Rush

CHICAGO, Jan. 31—A student nurse, whose heart and lungs stopped functioning for almost two hours, was back on duty today because of the strenuous work of surgeons and a $32 homemade machine.

Dark-haired Darline Timke, 21, went about her tasks at Chicago's Presbyterian Hospital, scene of the hair-raising fight for her life, fully recovered from her brush with death.

Doctors said the only ill effects she suffered from the ordeal was a brief period of amnesia. But even that has been partly wiped away.

"She positively owes her life to an electrical device perfected in our research department," said Dr. William G. Hibbs, medical director at the hospital.

He indicated a small metal box about eight inches square from which hung two wires tipped by electrodes.

But he quickly passed over the desperate work of physicians attending the nurse whose efforts figured heavily in her survival.

Last Dec. 12, Miss Timke went into the operating room for a small surgery job on her nose which had been obstructed ever since a childhood injury.

Almost immediately after the anesthetic was given, Miss Timke's heart and lungs quit functioning. Her breathing and pulse stopped abruptly.

Dr. Hibbs said she suffered a ventricular fibrillation which he explained as a weak and uncoordinated contraction of the heart muscle.

The anesthetist forced oxygen into Miss Timke's lungs.

A surgeon made two incisions in her chest. The doctors massaged her heart for four minutes. Once again her blood began to flow.

Then three surgeons took turns pumping her heart by hand. Her heart fluttered weakly. Then a physician brought in the $32 electric box. He flipped a switch and handed two electrodes to a surgeon, who touched her heart with them for half a second.

The nurse's heart stopped. An instant later it quivered and started beating normally.

Second-Time Pappy Has Rough Time

THE SECOND experience as an expectant father is not always easier.

Just ask Ralph Dean, 7777 W. Washington St., new proud father of a 7-pound, 7-ounce daughter.

Seems Mr. Dean was rushing his wife, Hester, to the hospital last night when their car was wrecked in an accident. Neither was hurt. But there still was the problem of getting to the hospital in time.

A sympathetic passing motorist took the worried couple on to Methodist Hospital. They arrived shortly after midnight.

For two hours Mr. Dean restlessly paced up and down the waiting room. At 2:30 a. m., he got the glad tidings—a sister for their little son who celebrated his first birthday only 24 days ago.

Goodwill Industries Reports Record Year

The agency reported 107 persons on the regular payroll. Trained at Goodwill to move into private industry were 191 persons.

The year ended with a balanced budget despite addition of a cafeteria and extensive decorating and electrical work. Approved for 1952 was a budget for $266,635 officers reported.

Trolley Rope Snags Pedestrian

A pedestrian and a trackless trolley rope participated in a freak accident in the 400 block of Indiana Ave. last night.

Edward E. Berry, 27, of 1116 N. Capitol Ave., was crossing the street when he was caught around the neck by the rope. It was swinging loose from the passing trolley.

He suffered neck cuts and bruises from his fall to the street. Police said if the rope had caught him a little lower, it could have been fatal.

Mr. Berry remained at General Hospital today, in fair condition.

Urges Civil Defense In War and Peace

Indiana civil defense director Frederick T. Cretors told county directors from 15 areas yesterday they can "sell" the program to the public as a peacetime as well as a wartime defense measure.

"It will provide a working organization for use in natural disasters such as extensive floods, as well as serve as deterrent to enemy attack," he said.

County directors at the meeting were from Grant, Lake, Elkhart, Marion, St. Joseph, Madison, Allen, Tippecanoe, Clark, Vigo, Hamilton, Monroe, Dearborn, Delaware and Vanderburgh Counties.

Now, It's the Rugs That May Explode

NEW YORK, Jan. 31 (UP)—Shoppers were warned yesterday against exploding rugs apparently made of the same material as the quick-burning sweaters recently found on sale throughout the country.

The Greater New York Safety Council said the rugs burst into flames when placed near an open fire or when a spark falls on them.

The council said the rugs have been found in Cambridge, Mass., and other cities.
