MRS. BONINE REFUSED BAIL.

Application for Release Upon Habeas Corpus Writ Denied.

Attorneys for Mrs. Lola Bonine, now in jail in Washington for the killing of James Ayres, the census clerk who was shot to death in his room at the Hotel Kenmore, filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus. The petition recited that she was unlawfully detained and made the verdict of the coroner's jury a part of her plea. The jury's verdict was that Ayres came to his death in a struggle, but did not implicate Mrs. Bonine. Her attorneys declared that she was ready to furnish bail and urged that she be at once released.

Judge Barnard, after reading the petition, heard arguments of counsel. He refused to allow the release of Mrs. Bonine on bail, denying the application for a writ of habeas corpus.

The case has been the subject of much discussion among the legal lights of Washington, it being the almost unanimous opinion that if the fair prisoner's story of the killing is false, it is one of the most ingenious ever constructed, and will be one of the most difficult upon which to convict ever presented to a jury.

GEORGE D. HERRON MARRIES.

Socialist Is United to Miss Rand in Rooms of a Friend.

Without the exchange of the usual matrimonial vows, with none of the ritual of the formulas either of church or state, Prof. George D. Herron, leader of the socialist crusade, and late clergyman of the Congregational Church, took as his wife last Saturday night the young woman for whose love he had already abandoned the mother of his children. The unique wedding of Prof. Herron to Miss Carrie Rand took place in the apartments of Dr. Charles B. Patterson, in the Schuyler apartment house in New York, in which establishment Prof. Herron has had rooms since he went to the city early in the spring.

There were no plighted vows of faithfulness, nor was there the customary bestowal of the wedding ring in token of an indissoluble union. What meager ceremony there was attending the event was performed by Rev. William T. Brown, pastor of the Plymouth Church of Rochester, N. Y., who is in sympathy with many of Prof. Herron's socialistic views, and is a member of the socialist brotherhood.

Dr. Patterson gave a dinner to the party after the wedding. No presents were given save of the simplest nature, except the gift of Miss Rand's mother. This was a 35-acre farm near Metuchen, N. J., where Prof. Herron and his wife are to live, and upon which Mr. Herron and those interested in the socialist brotherhood to which he belongs expect to work during the coming summer.

WORLD'S WHEAT YIELD

Is Nearly Equalled by the Corn Crop of the United States.

The Department of Agriculture's compilation of statistics showing the world's wheat crop in 1900 brings out the fact that it was lighter than in either of the two years immediately preceding, and only about 80,000,000 bushels in excess of 1898. The following summary shows the wheat crop by continents for each of the two years last past:

	1900.	1899.
North America...	581,772,000	619,224,000
South America...	120,137,000	125,146,000
Europe...	1,476,142,000	1,522,020,000
Asia...	312,982,000	408,200,000
Africa...	2,506,320,000	42,273,000
Australasia...	50,111,000	56,202,000
Grand total...	2,586,564,000	2,768,295,000

The Siberian wheat crop, which amounted to 45,473,000 bushels in 1899, was short 55 per cent in 1900, and there was a shortage of 53 per cent in Manitoba. The following table compares the aggregate wheat crop the world over, for ten years past:

Year.	Bushels.
1900...	2,586,564,000
1899...	2,768,295,000
1898...	2,942,439,000
1897...	2,284,461,000
1896...	2,506,320,000
1895...	2,482,522,000

The wheat crop of 1900, it will be seen, was close to the average for the past ten years. It will also be noted that the wheat crop of the whole world is only one-fifth more, in bushels, than the corn crop of the United States.
