Monticello Journal: Mr. French, the father of the French Brothers of Brookston and an old resident of Remington has been in town to-day interviewing J. H. McCollum, Richard Limes and other old timers in reference to their ancestors. Mr. French is working on a history of the French family and finds that the people mentioned are related to the family and he is tracing out the relationship and ascertaining what they may have in the way of records of the past.

The fine large residence of former banker Robt. Parker has been sold to Frank Howard by Trustee Cheadle. Consideration, $4,600. This property is said to have cost Mr. Parker $8,000 some fifteen or sixteen years ago. At this writing the bank building has not been disposed of nor the Denver, Colo., lots nor any of the property away from here, we are told. The Denver lots are said to be in a rather poor condition and are not very valuable. Probably $85 to $100 each will be all that can be realized for them. There is also some real estate at Gas City, Ind., that is not very valuable at this time as the town is practically dead at present.

Foley's Honey and Tar clears the air passages, stops the irritation in the throat, soothes the inflamed membranes, and the most obstinate cough disappears. Sore and inflamed lungs are healed and strengthened, and the cold is expelled from the system. Refuse any but the genuine in the yellow package. A. F. LONG.

is, by no means, the dreadful disease it is thought to be—in the beginning.

It can always be stopped—in the beginning. The trouble is: you don't know you've got it; you don't believe it; you won't believe it—till you are forced to. Then it is dangerous.

Don't be afraid; but attend to it quick—you can do it yourself and at home. Take Jimmy's Thanksgiving.

By OLIVE HARPER.

JIMMY WEBSTER, more properly Geraldine, had determined to leave her country home to study art in New York. "I know I am an artist; perhaps I am a genius," she said. Her mother said nothing against the project, but new lines formed around her mouth. Something had gone out of her father's eyes.

and step, and he looked older. He, too, remained silent. George Seabright, when his pleading proved vain, merely said, "If you find the world too much for you, let me know."

"Perhaps," replied the young girl, while her pretty lips took a hard outline new to them. She had $180 and thought that more than enough to last until fall and riches came. When she was gone the whole farm seemed empty. Her brave, bright letters told how she and three other girls had rented a photograph loft for only $40 a month. They had made it very artistic, had built wardrobes of packing boxes and made divans of coats covered with denim, which served as cozy beds at night. She told of the screen made of a clotheshorse, covered also with denim, which served to hide their bachelor girl kitchen with its coal oil stove and packing box closets for dishes. Her father made no comment on these pitiful makeshifts, but he and George read between the lines. They knew there was something wrong. There was a forced breeziness in the letters, George had loved Jimmy since she was a baby, and he decided as Thanksgiving drew near that he could stand the strain no longer.

In the meantime the four girls in the great, bleak, ancient photographer's gallery were finding it very hard to win fame. The rent, though divided among four, was high when nothing was coming in. They could not afford a stove, and tea and dry bread were their food. Finally one girl sat down on the floor and began to wall. She was cold and hungry and miserable. She was going home, "and art could go to grass!"

This voiced the general sentiment, but Jimmy had come from sterner stock, and she wouldn't give up. Three of the four girls wrote to their parents and in a week had said goodbye to Jimmy, who faced the question of rent alone. She threw herself on the cot and cried all night with hunger, cold and the knowledge that she was bent on. From talent to genius was a far cry, and she was no genius.

"But I wouldn't care," she sobbed. "If it were not so near Thanksgiving. At home there'll be turkey and pies and cake and jellies and—I just can't stand it!"

But she never once thought of writing home for help. The next morning she lay unconscious in her lonely place tossing in fever, while her grieving father and mother were going around heavy footed making preparations for the coming feast.

Jimmy lay two nights and a day ill and alone, when a lady who had an office in the same building had a feeling that something was wrong up stairs and went up to find the poor deserted child. The doctor said she should go to a hospital and that he would send for her. There was a hurried step on the stairs, and in a minute George was on his knees beside the cot.

"Oh, Jimmy, little Jimmy! I knew something was wrong, and I've come to take you home if you'll go."

"Will I? Oh, George, I'll be so thankful. I'm a failure, George—I'm a failure!"

"I don't think so. Can she travel, doctor? I'll get a carriage. She'll be home just in time for Thanksgiving."

"It will be that for me," said Jimmy weakly, while two tears jumped from her eyes, and big George Seabright put his arms around her and pressed his first kiss on her quivering lips regardless of the doctor and the lady.

"It will be an eternal Thanksgiving, Jimmy!"

That's Why.

"I hear that he failed in business."

"Yes, I believe he did."

"But I didn't know he had a business."

"He didn't."
