COURT NEWS

Supreme court action of interest to Democrat readers:

Railroad Fire Law—Powers of State—22472. The Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad Company vs. Chapell. Jasper C. C. Affirmed. Cox, C. J. (1) Action for damages by fire set by locomotive. The complaint does not set up negligence, but proceeds under Acts 1911, page 186; Burns, 1914, Secs. 5525a and 5525b. This law is held constitutional, and to include all roads using fire in the locomotives, including roads owned by partnerships. (2) Partnerships are included both under the term "companies" and also "individuals." (3) It was within the police power of the state to make railroad owners liable for fires from engines without making factory owners, traction engine owners and others using fire to generate steam power liable. (4) The law is not unconstitutional in applying to roads built prior to its passage under charters to operate by steam power. "Every holder of property, however absolute and unqualified may be his title, holds it under the implied liability that his use of it may be so regulated that it shall not encroach injuriously on the equal enjoyment of their property by others." (5) Rights and privileges from states under contracts and franchises are held subject to regulation by the state for the protection of the essential wellbeing of state. Railroad fire laws have always been upheld in all other states. (6) The provision that the defendant shall have the burden of proof of contributing negligence is within the title. (7) An instruction that the jury "should" take into consideration the interest or lack of interest of the witness in determining his credibility did not invade the province of the jury.

PROGRESSIVE PARTY COLUMN.

All matter appearing under this head is paid for at advertising rates, and The Democrat assumes no responsibility therefor.

This year, Mr. Voter, you vote for United States Senator direct. The names of the candidates for United States Senator, for the first time in history, will appear on the ballot, and you can take your choice among the men. The name of Albert J. Beveridge will be on the ticket, just as the name of the state candidates will be on the ticket. No legislative or local issue will stand between you and your senatorial choice. Make your choice, Mr. Voter, on the record and relative efficiency of the men. You know the qualifications of all the candidates. Vote for Indiana and the well-being of her people. Send Albert J. Beveridge back to Washington to do duty again for the people. Mr. Beveridge today is at the height of his powers. He has had precisely the experience that is needed, and he adds to that experience a commanding ability, an abounding energy, a tireless industry and a wonderful capacity for getting things done. Mr. Beveridge knows the Washington game. Not only that, Mr. Beveridge in 1915 and in the years to follow, would have at his back a public opinion which has been developed in the last sixteen or twenty years in the United States, and that sane and compelling public opinion would enable him to achieve greatly more remedial and beneficial legislation than could be put over in the period of his former service. The time is ripe for progress at Washington, and the time is here for the people to send to the front their ablest and bravest champions. This means Mr. Beveridge in Indiana. This is one thing the average voter already concedes.

This country has got to have, and in time will have a non-partisan tariff commission, with power in the law to get the facts and to report the truth as to tariff needs to the public, to the President and to the Congress.

Nobody says that the power to make revenue laws abides in the national House. Nobody attempts to take that power from the House. It is urged, simply, that a business matter, the tariff, shall be dealt with by experts and not by politicians.

Members of the House and Senate are not elected because they are tariff experts. Far from it. In many cases they are there because they are expert politicians, which is another thing.

But the non-partisan members of a tariff commission would be appointed for the one and only reason that they are experts. This would be the case if the tariff commission law were honestly drawn and honestly passed. The spirit of the whole business tariff proposition calls for tariff experts who shall be as non-political and as non-partisan as the officers of the army and navy, and as patriotic and as loyal as the men at arms.

Having the facts, getting the truth and laying the truth before the people, before the President and before Congress, the tariff commission would have served well to pave the way for honest tariff legislation. For the commission, with its report, would make recommendations. With an informed public, and with a public opinion backing it up, the tariff commission could and would make its impress upon the Congress, no matter how reactionary or how recalcitrant the politicians might try to be.

After all, it is only when the people know what is going on that good laws can be forced through the old party machines that dominate Washington affairs. This has been true for many years. It is only through giving the people the advantage of expert and exact knowledge of conditions that honest tariff legislation can be had.

In short, the Progressive idea is to take the tariff out of the hands of the politicians and to put the making of an honest tariff in the hands of experts who, basing their recommendations on the facts, can prepare for congressional action in a sane and orderly and non-partisan way.

Having taken the tariff-making job out of the hands of politicians who do not know how to make an honest tariff, the Progressive idea then is to revise one schedule at a time, without reference to any other schedule, to the end that log-rollers for one schedule may not be enabled to trade votes with log-rollers for some other iniquitous grab.

All this is simplicity itself. It works well in Germany, and has worked well there for years. It is applied gumption. That's all.

Positively Masters Croup.

Foley's Honey and Tar Compound cuts the thick, choking mucus, and clears away the phlegm. Opens up the air passages and stops the hoarse cough. The gasping, strangling fight for breath gives way to quiet breathing and peaceful sleep. Harold Berg, Mass., Mich., writes: "We give Foley's Honey and Tar to our children for croup and it always acts quickly."—A. F. LONG.

"See America First."

Have you tried to sell your neighbor All the products of your labor, Do the people round about you buy your shoes?

Of the goods that you are making Are you certain they are taking All that they will ever want or ever use?

You go reaching out for orders, Unto far off, foreign borders Your clever, busy salesmen yearly roam;

Now the war that's on off yonder Gives you double cause to ponder, Are you doing all you could do here at home?

Are you every minute filling Seeking franc and mark and shilling, While the dollar's lying idle at your gates?

Are you sure your tale's been told to, Are your products have been sold to Every customer in these United States?

Now in Europe bombshells hurtle Over fields that once were fertile And there isn't any business 'cross the foam;

Don't you think some grit and muscle, You could do more than you're doing here at home?

Here's a nation big and splendid, By the arts of peace defended, Here's the heaven of the merchant-men of trade;

Here's the home of honest labor; Why not cultivate your neighbor? Why not sell to him the products you have made?

Why pass up the fertile home town For the far across the foam-town? Why for business must you tap at foreign gates?

There is much more that you could do, There is much more that you would do

If you'd give your time to these United States.
