"We have used Peruna in our family
for a number of years, and have found it a perfectly
reliable medicine.
I have used the system on an attack
of a cold, and prevents serious consequences.
"I have used it
for catarrh, which I suffered with a good many years,
but had not been very serious until recently.
Since I have taken Peruna the dropping in my throat has stopped, and my colds are not so stopped up in the morning. I am pleased with the results, and shall continue to use it until I am entirely rid of catarrh.
"I heartily recommend it as an honest medicine."
What it does for her it is ready to do for you."

HE GOT IT A LITTLE MIXED

Youthful Naval Officer Had Difficulty Giving First Order When Left in Command.

Clothing the immature in a little brief authority and responsibility is frequently attended with results the reverse of impressive, as in the case of one of Uncle Sam's youthful officers below set forth.

While a certain war craft was lying at the Brooklyn navy yard a young ensign was placed in command of the deck. It happened that only one item remained on the list of the morning's duties, and that was to sweep decks at seven bells.

It was not a very martial command to give, but as the time approached, the officer took his stand near the mainmast, and called out in a very weak voice: "Bo's'n's mate!"

The man addressed sprang to his feet with finger touching cap. "Aye, aye, sir," he replied.

Glancing hastily around, the scared officer muttered hoarsely, "Swipe sweepers!"

It was an entirely new order to the boatswain's mate. He touched his cap inquisitively. The ensign, more confused than ever, stammered desperately:

"Peep sweepers, my man."

The words were overheard, and the laugh which followed proved the last straw. The ensign drew himself up, and with withering scorn explained:

"Sweep pipers, and be quick about it, too!"

This time his order was obeyed, the grinning boatswain's mate having fathomed his meaning.

Desired the Pleasure.

"Major Rasher, I saw a man today who would like the pleasure of kicking you," said a friend.

"Kicking me!" exploded the major. "Kicking me! Give me his name at once!"

"I hardly like to tell you," said the other.

"Insist upon knowing," said the major.

"Ah, well, I'll tell you," said the other. "It's a soldier who's in the hospital with both legs off."—London Times.

Around the House

If plants freeze immerse them in cold water and keep them in a perfectly dark place until thoroughly thawed out, says the Farm Journal.

A funnel makes a handy egg separator. Break the egg into it, and the white will slip through, leaving the yolk unbroken.

If new tinware is rubbed over with fresh lard, then thoroughly heated in the oven before it is used, it will be less liable to rust.

Add a few drops of water to the gasoline used in cleaning clothing, and you will have no "ring" about the spot you have cleaned.

Put scraps of cold meat through the food chopper and stir these in cornmeal mush when making it to fry. This makes an appetizing dish for breakfast.

Tart apples are good baked with honey. Pare and core and place them in a baking dish with a lump of butter in each, pour over some honey and bake until soft.

Give the egg beater a drop of oil occasionally on its pivot and cogs, but wipe off all surplus oil before using, or it will splatter into what you are heating.

Keep the bottle of spirits of turpentine handy to the washroom. A few drops in wash water help to take the dirt out and give clothes a nice clean smell.

If you have some vegetables that seem to be getting a bit stale clip off the lower end and let them stand in fresh water for a few hours. Makes them fine.

Proper Care of Eggs

Intended For Incubation

Poor hatches cannot always be charged to the hen or the incubator. Of great importance in securing a good hatch is the care of the eggs before they are placed in the incubator.

While it is not known definitely at what temperature eggs chill, it is safe to keep them in a temperature of 55 degrees to 65 degrees F. Eggs start to incubate at 68 degrees to 70 degrees F. and develop slowly, but they will not hatch successfully at that temperature. Many eggs are chilled through not being gathered often enough.

Incubator eggs can be kept in a simple tray by laying them on their sides. It is a good practice to turn them daily to prevent the yolk from adhering to the upper part of the shell. Washing hatching eggs removes the bloom and permits of too rapid evaporation.

To prevent diseases which might be caused from insanitary eggs the Pennsylvania State college school of agriculture and experiment station recommends dipping them in a disinfectant like alcohol or a 2 to 3 per cent stock dip solution. In any case the eggs should not be rubbed.

It is impossible to tell whether an egg is fertile or infertile except by incubation. A common superstition advocated by some poultrymen is that long eggs produce cockerels and short eggs poults. It is impossible, however, to foretell sex by the shape of an egg.

It is best to wait four to seven days after mating for hatching eggs. From one mating fertility will last two or three weeks.

Light as Chaff

The Smart Porter.

"Here, you!" cried the fur coated gentleman to the porter on the suburban station. "Don't you think that truck is rather dangerous in that position?"

"Wot!" said the newly promoted colored porter. "Think it's pretty dangerous, does yer? Ain't dat nice of yer to notice it! I s'pose yer gwine tell me where to put it? An' how 'bout de ticket office?"

Mebbe yer t'ink dat would look better out on de track. An' de switch tower? S'posin' we put her right over dere on Main street? 'P'raps you don't like where de station master's house am. Let's move her on to de up platform. Any more suggestions yer got ter make?"

The fur coated gentleman turned away and left the station.

"Say," said the porter to the ticket seller, "did yer hear how I turned down dat old guy? Pretty good, don't yer think?"

"Well, I dunno about that," said the ticket seller. "He happens to be our traffic superintendent."

"Ah, well, I'll tell you," said the other.

"Insist upon knowing," said the major.
