G. O. P. MEN WOULD TIE THE LEADER'S HANDS

Republican Leaders Figuring on Taking Constitutional Powers of Commander-in-Chief
From President.

SAY THEY CAN MANAGE THE WAR BETTER THAN WILSON

Importance of a Single Responsible Head in Our National Work as Important as Direct Command of Armies in the Field.

There is no attempt on the part of Republican leaders to disguise their desire to get control of Congress, and through it interfere with the constitutional powers of the President as commander-in-chief of the army and navy of the United States. They state frankly that they can manage the war better than President Wilson has managed it. Their denunciations of Daniels, McAdoo and Baker, in their respective functions, had some weight with a certain class of people while the Germans were making their successful drive last spring; but since Foch was put in supreme command and the victories are coming our way, it is seen that the management has been of the wisest character.

It will be remembered that the appointment of Foch was at the urgent appeal of President Wilson, and that Secretary Baker went to France for the special purpose of getting a single head to the allied forces. Instead of an independent command for each nation. The importance of a single responsible head is just as evident in our national work in the war as it is in the direct command of the armies in the field. If the management were taken over by Congress there would never be any action except by compromise and bargains among Congressmen. A legislative body has no qualifications for executive work.

PENROSE REVEALS THE G. O. P. SCHEME.

And yet this absurd thing is actually contemplated by Republican leaders, as appears from an interview given by Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania to the Philadelphia Ledger on the day after President Wilson addressed Congress on the revenue situation. In discussing a conference he and Chairman Hays of the Republican national committee were to have with Pennsylvania Republican chieftains the boss of the Keystone State said:

"The judgment of Republican leaders generally is that the party should wage a vigorous campaign for the election of a majority of the House in the next Congress. It is felt that Congress should assume its full share of the responsibility in the direction of the work of the war. Of course, there will be no disposition to hamper or embarrass the President in any way, but with the Republicans in the majority of the House a searching investigation of every bureau that needs investigation would be assured."

Just what Senator Penrose means may be gathered by reading the following comment in the New York World on an editorial in the New York Tribune:

"We had never realized what the great advantages to the country would be in a Congress with 100 Republican majority, as Senator Penrose declared, until the Tribune explained the great work that such a Congress could do:

"Congress could, by a single vote, practically take the President any power whatsoever as to the preparation and organization for the war. It could abolish Secretary Baker's office, could create a new Board, with practically absolute authority. 'It could take the whole conduct of the war into its own hands. 'Or delegate it to the supreme court or any other body it chose to designate or authorize.

"Conceivably, sometime Congress may be impelled to exercise the constitutional authority which it possesses. It cannot now."

"For this full two-thirds majority in both houses would be necessary in order to pass any such measures over the President's veto and, if it were necessary, to impeach any judge or any other official who attempted to question this clear constitutional right."

"Under present conditions this two-thirds majority is lacking, and so long as the Democratic party retains its present holding in the two houses the situation will remain."

"This Congress cannot strip the President of all his war powers, which in the past it has done, and it cannot impeach the President for refusing to permit the destruction of the United States Government, because the Democrats are in control. Under present conditions the necessary anti-Wilson majority is lacking, and so long as the Democratic party retains its present holding in the two houses this situation will remain."

"Is the Tribune speaking for the leaders of the Republican party when it insists that the way to win the war is to wreck the Constitution and the Government of the United States? Is this to be the Republican program in the campaign of 1918?"

WICKERSHAM ALSO TALKS FRANKLY.

Further explanation of the purpose of Republican machine leaders in the event of the overthrow of the present control of Congress is found in the surprising frank speech of George W. Wickersham, former United States Attorney-General, recently at a Republican banquet at Lancaster, Pa.

Speaking to young Republicans of Pennsylvania, Mr. Wickersham, according to the Lancaster Intelligencer, threw aside restraint and launched into a bitter attack on the administration. He charged the President with building up a great political machine and with making the war "as far as possible a Democratic matter."

"He urged the Republicans," said the Intelligencer, "to elect members of their party to Congress, but be sure to select the very best men, that those who so kindly acquiesced in everything proposed by the administration without proper criticism should be retired. He claimed that any attempt to change our social customs because of the war would be unfortunate and that healthy public criticism and even relentless criticism was more necessary in time of war than in time of peace and that 'the Republican party would be false to its high mission if she fails to devote all of her energies to the preservation of our constitutional liberties against supervision under the guise of war necessities.'"

CONGRESSMAN KAHN

Representative Kahn will tour Indiana for the Republican State Committee. What will he say to the dry Republicans who claim to dominate that party?

Farmers and Stockraisers Say:

We wish to indorse President Wilson and his administration because he is leading the greatest agricultural nation in the world to a victory that will guarantee to the peoples of the old world that blessing of Liberty which has been ours for more than a century. Under the Agricultural Extension Act and the Federal Farm Loan Law our agricultural interests have been rebuilt and placed upon a stable basis. Our volume of production has increased by leaps and bounds until we are assured that America can feed the Allies during the period of the war, let its continuance be a matter of months or of years. The fathers and mothers of America can be thankful that all the fiendish ingenuity of the Kaiser can not starve the soldiers of freedom into submission. In rebuilding our agricultural interests and bringing the helpful influence of our government directly to the aid of this great industry, the Democratic party not only assured our success in war, but it laid the sure foundation for a higher civilization and greater national wealth.

We indorse the administration of President Wilson because the policy of price regulation has been to fix a minimum price for the fundamental food products of our country, which guarantees to the producers a fair and reasonable profit and has prevented manipulation and profiteering in these essentials.

We also indorse President Wilson and his party because they have given to agriculture more beneficial legislation than was given us during the entire lifetime of the Republican party.

PHILOSOPHY OF WALT MASON

I heard the down-and-out'er say,
"I'm canned because I'm old and gray. Employers shoo me from their doors; they want young men to do their chores. I know I'm long on sterling worth, but there's no place for me on earth, no job for me beneath the moon, for I was born some years too soon. Youth must be served, and age must slide down where the dump is yawning wide." I've often heard this dismal spiel from gents panhandling for a meal, but in my daily walks I find that old boys do not fall behind, if they still keep their smiles on straight, and keep their habits up-to-date. Too many old men sing this song, that every modern thing is wrong. They're always talking of the past, and so can make things come to pass, if they're also rans at last. A man's gray hair will cut no grass, if he he will blithely do his stunt with cheerful and undaunted front.

Land for Sale and Trade

I have for sale farms large and small, all well located on or near improved roads, close to good markets, convenient to schools and churches.

The prices are right and the terms reasonable. Can take trade on some of these lands.

The cheapest thing on the market today is land that will pay for itself in one, two and three crops. Every thrifty tenant, or other person desiring an investment, who can raise $1,000 or more by fall, can own a good farm.

Let me know the kind and size of farm you want, and I will show you the lands and arrange the terms to suit you.

If you have a farm for sale,
list it with me at once.

SAMUEL L. CALLAWAY.

Sam L. Callaway, Democratic candidate for Clerk of the Supreme Court and Ex-Officio Clerk of the Appellate Court of Indiana, is well and personally known over the State. He was born in Cass county, raised on a farm in White county, taught school, read law, was clerk of the White Circuit Court, being well qualified for the position he seeks; has made good with the attorneys over the State who do business with the Clerk's office—being nominated from White county and the tenth district—and the only Deputy Clerk ever nominated by either party for the office.
He is asking your support on
