MR. TAGGART RESIGNS PLACE ON TICKET

Thomas Taggart has resigned as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for U. S. senator from Indiana, stating that the condition of his health is such that he cannot make the necessary campaign. The Democratic state committee has the power to fill the place for the primary election.

In speaking of the resignation of the Indianapolis News (Rep.) which has most bitterly fought Mr. Taggart in years past, because of the fact that he was an astute politician as well as an able and honorable gentleman and an active worker in the Democratic ranks, says:

Regretfully former Senator Taggart declines to be a candidate for re-election, though he was assured of the Democratic nomination. There are many people in Indiana, not all of them by any means members of the Democratic party, who will be sorry that he is not to make the race. He was recognized as probably the strongest candidate that the Democrats could have chosen, with the exception of the vice-president, who had refused the honor. But Mr. Taggart gives the best of reasons for his action, namely the lack of physical strength necessary to make the campaign. There can be no quarreling with a decision based on such grounds. As the time for nominations in the ordinary way has gone by, it is supposed that it will be the duty of the state central committee to choose a candidate for senator. There are many men who would be glad to accept, but not many who would, if elected, be qualified to serve. The withdrawal of Mr. Taggart is, of course, a great disappointment to Indiana Democrats, who had believed that one of their most difficult and perplexing problems had been solved. The party will have a hard time in supplying a candidate that would now deem it impossible to make good their pledges to the former service men—at a cost of a billion dollars or more—and simultaneously keep the total expenditures of government under $4,000,000,000.

More than 4,000 farmers were accommodated with loans from the federal farm loan board's funds during the month of January. Their aggregate borrowings were above $15,000,000. These loans were for long periods and at interest rates much below those charged by private lenders. Many thousands of farmers have been directly benefited by this federal loan plan since its inception, and thousands more have reaped an indirect advantage through the reduction in interest rates brought about by this governmental agency. Like the federal reserve system, the farm loan act is Democratic legislation and is likely to remain on the books, notwithstanding all the Republican threats to repeal it.

All those charged with complicity in fraudulent and corrupt practices to insure the nomination and election of Truman H. Newberry as United States senator from Michigan are now ready to concede, doubtless, that the attempt to debauch an entire electorate was a grave blunder as well as a serious crime. Some of them have confessed their disgraceful parts in the criminal adventure; others have less plainly admitted their guilt by refusing to combat the charges against them. Whatever the fate of other promoters and beneficiaries of this fraud, corruption and conspiracy may be, so far as the verdict of a jury is concerned, they will have been convicted at the bar of public opinion.

Proposing a course of action for his party, Mr. Root urged, among other things, the accomplishment of five important enterprises which can only be initiated and consummated by congress. These recommendations of Mr. Root's contemplated: (1) Reduction of war taxes; (2) retrenchment in governmental expenditures; (3) adoption of a budgetary system; (4) withdrawal of the president's extraordinary war powers, and (5) immediate ratification of the treaty "with reservations."

Nothing is better known to the mass of the American people than that the Republican congress, in session since last May, with the exception of a few weeks, has failed and refused to reduce or modify war taxation, safeguard appropriations against wastefulness; adopt a budget or lessen the war powers—and the war burdens—the executive, notwithstanding the president's messages requesting the Republican majority to do these very things. It is well and universally understood that it was the Republican senators and not President Wilson who prevented the ratification of the treaty.

Among the "war powers" which were conferred on the president were those in connection with the government's control and operation of the railroads. It was necessary for the president to call upon the Republican congress twice in the space of eight months to force its leaders into framing and passing a measure that would return the roads to their private owners and thus relieve him of one of the most extensive and onerous of his "war powers."

The gentleman who is secretary of the committee of 171, chosen to prepare the republican platform for the next presidential campaign, assures the public (in his capacity as writer for newspapers) that the g. o. p. congress will have to vote a bonus for each former service man. He seems to think that the present policy of deception and delay cannot be continued indefinitely. The Republican leaders of congress find themselves in a difficult, not to say painful, situation, which is none the less unpleasant because it is of their own making. They have been promising generous recognition of the former soldiers and sailors. At the same time they have been committing themselves to a regime of "economy." They are quarreling with a decision based on such grounds. As the time for nominations in the ordinary way has gone by, it is supposed that it will be the duty of the state central committee to choose a candidate for senator. There are many men who would be glad to accept, but not many who would, if elected, be qualified to serve. The withdrawal of Mr. Taggart is, of course, a great disappointment to Indiana Democrats, who had believed that one of their most difficult and perplexing problems had been solved. WILL H. MACKEY, Proprietor

HE CAN PUT IN FULL TIME, NOW

For Nearly Three Years He Was Unable to Do a Day's Work— Feels Fine Since Taking Tanlac.

"My mother was even in a worse fix than I was and I can tell you that was pretty bad, but Tanlac has put us both in good shape," said Albert J. Helfert of 2009 Venable street, Richmond, Virginia, while discussing the medicine recently.

Mr. Helfert was born and reared in Richmond where he has followed his trade as brick mason for thirty years. He has helped to build many of the large brick buildings erected in Richmond during the past quarter century. Mr. Helfert stands high in the Brick Masons' Union, is also a leading member of the Richmond Eagles, Lodge No. 1, and is highly respected by all who know him.

"Regardless of exposure to all kinds of weather," explained Mr. Helfert, "I have always enjoyed very good health until three years ago. At that time I began to have pains in my back and joints which kept getting worse in spite of all I could do. Well, I found it was rheumatism that had me in its grip and I finally got to where it was agony for me to move. My back and knees hurt me so bad that I could hardly lift trowel and brick.

"I actually dreaded to go on a job, I ached so bad, and had just about decided to give up my work when a friend persuaded me to try Tanlac, saying it had relieved him of the same trouble and put him on his feet in good shape. That very same day I went to the drug store and got a bottle of Tanlac. I had tried all kinds of liniments and medicines without results, but Tanlac helped me right from the start and by the time I had finished my fourth bottle I was like a new man. I was able to go on the job and do a full day's work for the first time in nearly three years. At present I am as well as I have ever been in my life and I mean to say by that I haven't an ache or a pain of any kind.

"My mother had suffered from rheumatism for a number of years and even worse than I did. She had it so bad at times she couldn't cross the room without holding onto the chairs and bed. When she saw what Tanlac had done for me she began taking it and today she is getting around as well as if she wasn't more than twenty years of age. Her friends all seem astonished at her wonderful improvement and she never gets tired of telling about Tanlac. Knowing what I do about Tanlac, since it has done so much for mother and myself I am glad to show my appreciation by giving this statement for the benefit of others who need just such a medicine."

Tanlac is sold in Rensselaer by Lark & Hopkins, and in Remington by Frank L. Peck; in Wheatfield by Simon Fendig.—Advt.

LOST IN FOG; AVIATOR KILLED

Mail Airplane Strikes Tree and Burns Near Goshen.

Goshen, March 11.—Indiana's first fatality in the United States aerial mail service occurred yesterday when a flyer, identified by names on his clothing as Lieutenant Clayton Stoner, was burned to death near New Paris, in this county.

The Chicago-Cleveland air mail route goes over New Paris and Stoner, it is believed, became lost in a fog, sought to find the Wabash railroad and swept so low that his plane hit some trees in a woods, causing his machine to crash to the ground and bury him under the wreckage. The gas tank exploded, causing a fire which ended his life and destroyed the plane.

Stoner made several friends here three or four weeks ago, when he made a forced landing near this city. He called at the local post office and invited J. A. Bean, postmaster for Goshen, to accompany him to Cleveland, but the latter declined. At the time of the accident today he was on his way from Chicago to Cleveland and was unaccompanied.

A CROSSING ACCIDENT VICTIM

George Mears Dies at Lafayette After Crash Near Delphi.

Delphi, March 10.—George Mears, age 55, of near this city, died today at St. Elizabeth hospital in Lafayette of injuries received yesterday afternoon when a closed automobile in which he was riding was struck at a crossing near this city by a Ft. Wayne & Northern Indiana Traction company car. When the interurban hit the automobile, Mr. Mears was caught in the wreckage and was carried 250 feet. The side of his head was crushed and he was taken to Lafayette when an operation was performed in the hope of saving his life. He was a prominent retired farmer. A widow survives.
