ANTISTRIKE BILL PASSES SENATE

Adopts Poindexter Measure Making Rail Traffic Interference a Felony.

NO DEBATE OR RECORD VOTE

Measure Reported During Routine Consideration of Regular Calendar, With Only a Small Percentage of Members in Seats.

Washington, Dec. 17.—The Poindexter antistrike bill was passed by the senate without debate or a record vote. The measure, which now goes to the house, provides that interferences with interstate commerce shall be a felony.

Penalties for combinations interfering with interstate commerce, either by agreements between operatives or those of employers, are provided by the bill, which was introduced by the senator from Washington following elimination of the antistrike provisions from the transportation act when it was pending in conference.

The Poindexter bill was reported during routine consideration of the regular senate calendar, with only a small percentage of senators in their seats. No senator objected to its consideration.

Penalties Named in Bill.

The bill is limited in its application to common carriers under the transportation act. It provides a fine of $10,000 and ten years' imprisonment for persons who, "with intent to obstruct, delay, hinder or prevent the movement of the commodities in commerce . . . shall, by word of mouth or by presentation, exhibition or circulation of written or printed words, solicit, advise, induce or persuade, or attempt to induce or persuade any person or persons employed (by common carriers) . . . to quit such employment."

Penalties of $15,000 and 15 years' imprisonment are proposed for similar actions with the use of force or violence and for destruction or damage to carriers' property fines of $10,000 and ten years' imprisonment are proposed.

The final section of the bill declares "that nothing in this act shall be taken to deny to any individual the right to quit his employment for any reason."
