Jasper County Reminiscences.

COMPILED AND WRITTEN BY C. W. CLIFTON.

We have said that the counties of Jasper and Newton were organized in 1838, but they did not have separate organizations—Newton county being attached to Jasper for civil purposes. Mr. Henkle, now dead, a member of the Legislature that named the county, said he was present when the christening took place, and that the county was named in honor of Sergeant Jasper, of Revolutionary fame. It will be recollected by readers of our history as a nation, that Sergeant Jasper, when in the heat of the fight the American flag was shot from his fastening, he climbed the staff and, amid a perfect shower of bullets nailed the flag to its place. He was afterwards presented with a banner which for many years he bore through all the perils of our Revolutionary contest; and, 'tis said, was buried in its folds. It is supposed, also, that in honor of this flag the first paper established in the county was named "The Jasper Banner." Mr. McCarthy, its founder, I believe is still living in Newton county. The paper was neutral in politics at the time of its advent in 1840, but eventually became Democratic in politics. The subscription price of this newspaper was $1.50 per annum. The Rensselaer Gazette and other papers followed in its footsteps.

CAPITOLS.

But to return. After the organization of the county, it was necessary, as a matter of course, that the new territory have a capitol and a government. The house of Mr. Robert Alexander, in Parish Grove, in what is now Benton county, was the first court house. The first court was held there in 1838, the same year of the county organization. This new capitol being somewhat to one side of the counties, it was ordered that the county seat be removed to the residence of Mr. George Spiller, near what is now the village of Brook in Newton county, and that the terms of circuit, probate and commissioners' court for 1839 be held at Mr. Spiller's house. There was a proviso, however, which was, "Provided the citizens of Pine township are willing." Pine township was a small settlement on Big Pine in the then limits of Jasper county, and numbered at that time twenty-four or twenty-five male inhabitants over the age of twenty-one. Mr. Amos White, one of the earliest commissioners, was selected to canvass this settlement and obtain an expression of their opinion on this momentous question. Mr. White with a petition made the tour of the township, obtaining the signature of every voter either for or against the projected removal. With a self-forgetful magnanimity peculiar to all early pioneers, two-thirds of the settlers favored removal—sixteen voting "aye" and eight voting "no." Accordingly the capitol was removed. No great task at that early day; for, though the capitol of a territory occupying thirteen hundred square miles, nearly as large as the sovereign State of Rhode Island, its archives were not numbered by volumes of records. The new court house was of logs. Dimensions—sixteen by sixteen feet, one story. It was built by Mr. G. W. Spiller himself and cornered with his dwelling house. It stood about one mile, a little west of south, of the present town of Brook in Newton county, near the banks of a small stream that empties into the Irroquois near there. I visited the venerable relic of early times only a few years since, when it was still standing in a good state of preservation, the property of Mrs. Nancy Dell. Whether it is standing at this late day I cannot say, but I presume our friends of Newton county will know.

This remained county headquarters until March, 1840, when the county commissioners met at the new capitol and among other transactions was one ordering the seat of justice to be removed to the "Town of Newton on the rapids of the Rockwase."

It was accordingly loaded into a wagon and removed to its new quarters in the town of Newton, now Rensselaer, where it has ever since remained, and is likely to remain, unless Rensselaer succeeds and Nubbin Ridge gets a railroad, in which case—alas—well—who knows what may be.

"An hundred years to come."

COUNTY OFFICERS.

The first Judge appointed to the new counties was Judge Isaac Naylor. The first case heard in the county was a civil action of Haysy Montgomery, administrator, against Edward Boone, administrator. The first State case was against J. T. Timmons.

A wrongful prosecution, it is presumed, as the prosecuting attorney promptly entered a "noli pros." as the lawyers call it. The first petition for divorce in the county was by Mrs. Louisa Barr against Mr. Andrew

Barr. I cannot find out whether her petition was granted or no, but presume it was, for it could be sought but a serious matter that would put husband or wife praying for a separation when neighbors were few and far between, and every man's family was almost an independent community of itself; and government, if it existed, was of a primitive or Patriarchal type. The prosecuting attorney for the first court was Mr. Joseph Wright, who has since held several offices of trust under the people of the State, and twice, I believe, filled the gubernatorial chair.

The first county commissioners were Mr. Amos White, Mr. Frederic Kenoyer, and Mr. Joseph Smith, not he of Mormon notoriety, but a very estimable early resident of Jasper county. They were all gentlemen of ability and left good names and many descendants to perpetuate their memory. If not mistaken, the direct descendants of Mr. Amos White, now reside in, or near, Fowler in Benton county, and one near Tompkins. As I am wrong I hope the gentlemen there by that name will at once make the correction. Mr. Smith's family I am unable to trace, but Mr. Frederic Kenoyer's lineal descendants, still live in Newton county, or did a few years since. Two of them, Moses, and young Mr. Frederic Kenoyer having served during the late war in the same company and regiment (51st Ind.) with the writer.

The names of the first grand jurors serving in the first court were Messrs. Hanna, W. Donahoe, Hewitt, Wesley Spiller, Robert Malais, Lewis Eljah, William Giffany, Wm. Doran, Joseph Wooley, George Culp, Thomas Timmons, James Reed, Jas. Brown, Andrew Ritchey, Joseph Yeoman and Samuel Benjamin. Some few of this first panel are still living.

The first county auditor, clerk and recorder was George W. Spiller, he holding and filling the duties of all three, and, filling them satisfactorily, for it is common saying at this late day that our county affairs were never better managed than when one man was auditor, clerk and recorder.

Of Mr. Spiller's duties as auditor and clerk I know but little, but suppose they were not burdensome; surely not remunerative if we may take his record as recorder as a criterion from which to judge. I have taken some pains to examine deed record No. 1, which is full of interest and information.

The first deed the new recorder was called upon to transcribe was made on the 22d day of May, 1838, from Benjamin Lewis to Haysy Montgomery, for the northwest quarter of section 34, town 28, north, range 9, west—160 acres. The consideration was three hundred dollars—$1.875 per acre.

The acknowledgment was taken before Hugh Newell, clerk of circuit court, Irroquois county, Ill. The record bears date June 6, 1838. Four months and four days later, October 16, 1838, the second deed was recorded. Nearly one month later, November 7, 1838, the third, and December 4, 1838, the fourth deed was recorded. On the 14th of the same month Mr. Spiller had quite a run of luck, six deeds recorded on that day. In all, the first year of the organization, he recorded only ten deeds and mortgages. Mr. Spiller served as a public officer during almost the entire period of his life in the county. He was a man of talent, a versatile genius, a friend and helper to all who were worthy, and the county certainly owes as much to his memory as to any other man who ever dwelt within her borders.

He was killed by lightning while lying in bed, on the night of August 17, 1863.

His widow still lives, and is a resident of Rensselaer, a genial and worthy old lady, whose memory is replete with incidents of the past. His son, Mr. M. L. Spiller, is the present county clerk of Jasper county.

The first treasurer was a gentleman named Albert Pursell. As yet I have been unable to learn anything beyond the mere fact that he was the first county treasurer.

The first sheriff of the county was a Mr. Samuel M. Dunn.

The claim for first surveyor lays between Mr. Wesley Spiller and Mr. Andrew Ritchey. Mr. Ritchey was a very early surveyor and is remembered as wearing moccasins while on his surveying expeditions.

In January, 1839, the county commissioners divided Newton county into two townships. All lying north and west of the Irroquois river was named Newton township, and the remainder called Pink-a-mink township, an Indian name for one of the tributaries of the Irroquois and a name that the white settlers have endeavored.

The first election held in the county was held on the first Monday in April, 1839. The polls for Newton township were at the house of Mr. Joseph Yeoman, and for Pink-a-mink township at the house of Mr. William Donahoe.

In 1840 Marion township was struck off from the east side of Newton township.

The first session of the circuit court in what is now Jasper county, was held in an old log cabin standing on what is known as the Pat. Barton property, where now lives Mr. George W. Conwell.

The first letters of administration granted was in 1839, to Elias Clifton, on the estate of John Wolf, deceased.

The first dower set off was to Mrs. Julia Lewis, relict of Mr. Benjamin Lewis.

The first marriage license issued, was to Mr. James Lacy and Miss Matilda Blue.

The ceremony was performed by Mr. John Lyons, justice of the peace.

I had overlooked the first criminal case in the county. It was for assault and battery, against Jonathan Hunt. Who Mr. Hunt assaulted and battered, I do not know.

The first political speech made in the county was by Mr. Charles W. Giffany, a Democratic Candidate for State Senator. He held forth to an enthusiastic audience in the clerk's office, a small log structure about which it was said: "A clerk's office by day and a sleep's pen by night." Mrs. Spiller, widow of the clerk, adds by way of parenthesis that there was more truth than poetry in the report.

I have made up this chapter of topics that were rather miscellaneous, but which it was necessary to mention at some period of the narration. I shall future the more important matters for future issues, hoping to glean much more of interest to you.
