THAW'S WIFE OUT OF COURT

EXCLUDED WITH OTHER WIT-NESSES WHEN TAKING OF
TESTIMONY BEGINS.

STATE STARTS ITS PROOF

No Rush of Morbidly Curious to Hear the Evidence, as at First Trial—White's Kin-man Heard.

New York.—The trial of Harry K. Thaw entered upon its interesting state Monday without flourish or pyrotechnics. Justice Dowling ordered court opened at 10:05, and seven minutes later Francis J. Garvin, assistant attorney general, began the opening address for the prosecution, which consisted of a plain recital of the facts of the killing of Stanford White as the state viewed them.

In marked contrast to the first trial of Thaw, when Attorney Garvan began his opening statement there were just three persons in court not directly connected with the trial. By the time the first witness was well into his examination the number of spectators had increased to but 19.

In his opening statement Garvan said:

Statement for the State.

"The defense in this case is insanity, gentlemen of the jury. It is left to you to decide whether or not Harry K. Thaw owes to the state explanation for his criminal murder, on the roof of the Madison Square Garden, of Stanford White, an architect of this city. Insanity is a real defense, but in the case at the bar I believe we will not find the contention properly taken.

"We shall show you that before committing his crime, Thaw, in conversation with men well known, who will tell their own story, talked as could only have talked a rational man. Why, Thaw talked with James Clinch Smith for a long time before he killed White. A dozen different subjects, ranging from Wall street to light comedy, from an ocean voyage to the meeting of a man with a woman, were discussed. And from this conversation with a man he knew, in which he talked rationally and at times humorously, he went directly to the seat occupied by Stanford White, and, creeping up behind him, swung around his side and shot the sitting man through the eye, the ball entering the brain. Two other shots were fired, and then this criminal displayed the gun with which he committed his crime and was at once arrested.

"We contend that the killing of Stanford White was deliberate and premeditated murder, that his responsibility under the law is undoubtedly apparent; that he fired three times to make his dastardly crime trebly sure; and when the evidence is all in we shall ask you for a verdict of murder in the first degree."

Kirklin.—Fifty women of this place headed a mob of indignant citizens that called on the school board while its three members were in session, and demanded their resignations, presenting a petition at the same time from 158 property owners that the board step down and out. The board voted to postpone indefinitely consideration of the petition, and Mrs. Harry Cast, leader of the women, denounced the members in unmeasured terms. There was a perfect babel of voices in the room and some of the men, angered by the scant courtesy the women had received, were about to flog the members of the board when the crowd was induced to disperse. As soon as the crowd reached the street, Mr. Williams, one of the board, appeared at a window and was knocked down by a brick hurled at him. The people of the village want the school management turned over to the township trustee in order to have a new schoolhouse built in the corporate limits.
