

Confidence

when eating, that your food is of highest wholesomeness—that it has nothing in it that can injure or distress you—makes the repast doubly comfortable and satisfactory.

This supreme confidence you have when the food is raised with

Royal
Baking Powder
Absolutely Pure

The only baking powder made with Royal Grape Cream of Tartar

There can be no comforting confidence when eating alum baking powder food. Chemists say that more or less of the alum powder in unchanged alum or alum salts remains in the food.

DOG VARIATIONS.

Pointers and Setters Are of the Canine Aristocracy.

It is a mistake to suppose that dogs are anywhere near alike in character. Even those of the same breed vary, and about as much as men and women of the same nationality. As to the manners and the morals of dogs, they are to a great extent the result of their contact with man, and they develop along the same lines. And, on the other hand, it is impossible to make anything out of a mean spirited dog, just as it is out of a mean spirited person. Dog instinct is about the same as human instinct. A dog reasons, learns, judges by facts, exactly as a man reasons. He is quicker of observation. He has the keen sense of smell, which makes up to him in some measure for the vicarious experience of human beings. The dog must experience a thing to know it, and his faculties have been trained by generations of observation, of taking note, until they have reached their present perfection.

A dog has not the power of speech with which to conceal his thoughts. Consequently he is franker than man, but quite unconscious of it. When he is a dependent, he has the faults of one. He is vain, colourous, suspicious and a snob.

Pointers and setters are essential to the aristocracy of the dog world, and they have gentlemanly qualities. They have the grand air. They will allow themselves to be admired by ordinary people, but they never give their allegiance to any except the accomplished hunter. They are elegant of form and vigorous of muscle, like any athlete, and have a power of discrimination and thought.

The well bred contempt of a fine dog of one of these breeds for a man who has not intelligence enough to understand his strategy in the field must be seen to be appreciated. There is a story told of a trained pointer that was taken out with a party of inexperienced hunters. She was seen to spring to the top of a wall and then fall back. It was supposed she had caught her foot, and they ran to release her. She was holding by her paws and was beaten down as a stupid dog and turned and walked deliberately home. It was finally found that she had scented a covey of birds on the other side of the wall and, fearful of flushing them before the hunters came up, had fallen back out of sight.

You can note the dignity and moral worth of some dogs in their carriage, the poise of their heads and the expression of their eyes. A dog of sterling character never steals any more than a human being of this kind steals. — Amateur Sportsman.

Profound Emotional Sense.
Hold out your hands to feel the luxury of the sunbeams. Press the soft blossoms against your cheek and finger their graces of form, their delicate mutability of shape, their pliancy and freshness. Expose your face to the aerial floods that sweep the heavens, "inhale great drafts of space," wonder, wonder at the wind's unwearyed activity. Pile note on note the infinite music that flows increasingly to your soul from the tactful sonorities of a thousand branches and tumbling waters. How can the world be shrivelled when this most profound, emotional sense, touch, is faithful to its service? I am sure that if a fairy bade me choose between the sense of sight and that of touch I would not part with the warm, endearing contact of human hands or the wealth of form, the nobility and fullness that press into my palms.—Helen Keller's "Sense and Sensibility" in Century Magazine.

She—Just imagine! Supposing you were so immensely wealthy that you couldn't possibly spend your income What would you do?

He—Marry you.—New York Mail.
