BROWN'S IN TOWN.

Theater-goers will be in a position to pass unbiased judgment on the force, "Brown's in Town," which appears tonight and for the balance of the week at the Towle opera house. Many of the situations in the farce are declared new and original and it is said that the error of slap-dash and knock-about has been avoided. "Brown" visits the small village of Honeyuckle Lodge, because, while he is about to enjoy his honeymoon, with his young and pretty wife, whom he has secretly married, a host of relatives and friends visit the same. Their coming and going, and the fact that Brown tries to keep his marriage a secret, makes the story of the play. The cast is an excellent one.

"THE END OF THE TRAIL."

"The End of the Trail," which is to be produced by Willis J. Jackson at Towle opera house beginning Sunday matinee and four nights, Oct. 4, is causing a great sensation and arouses the strongest interest wherever it is played. It is different to stage a play of the west and get the real atmosphere of that thrilling country, but this piece fairly breathes the air of the open plains. It penetrates the whole and makes one feel as if one were living on the old Santa Rosita ranch and shared the joys and sorrows of the characters in the play. The cast is more than good.

HICKORY TREE HIS MONUMENT.

It Marks the Grave of an Ardent Admirer of Andrew Jackson.

In the Baptist graveyard at Canton lies the body of an old revolutionary soldier named James Sayres. A rude, unlettered sandstone marks his grave, but a more conspicuous monument is a large hickory tree the trunk of which, three feet from the ground, measures 51½ inches in circumference.

James Sayres was an ardent admirer of Andrew Jackson, so often called "Old Hickory" from the character of being so unbending in any cause which he believed to be right.

Mr. Sayres always wore a sprig of hickory on his breast on "training days," and before he died directed that a hickory tree be planted on his grave. This was done, and after the tree attained proportions deemed suitable to adorn a grave it was dug roots left in, and this in time was also dug up.

When a third tree appeared, with a persistence in a good cause worthy of emulation, relatives of the deceased directed that it be not disturbed. Hence the tree of large proportions that annually showers its nuts over the grave of the admirer of "Old Hickory."—Philadelphia Record.

Righteous Resentment.

"You may put that back in the showcase!" said the indignant Mrs. Lapsling to the milliner. "I wouldn't even wear, much less buy a hat named in honor of that horrid murderer, Charlotte Corduroy!"

NO LONGER EXISTS IN INDIANA

Senator A. J. Beveridge interviewed in Chicago Today Declares That There Is No Democratic Party in Indiana Any Longer.

CALLS IT THE BREWERS PARTY

"Bryan Is a Forgotten Figure," Says Indiana's Senior Senator; "And His Issues Are Overshadowed By Local Issues, Chief Figure of Which Is Taggart."

"The democratic party, in the general acceptance of the term, no longer exists in Indiana, and I am, therefore, unable to say anything about its prospects."

Senator Albert J. Beveridge, who was in Chicago for a few hours while he was on his way to the northwest, where he is to speak for Taft and Sherman, thus dismissed the claims of democratic managers that Indiana will be found in the democratic column this year.

"Will Meet Signal Defeat."

"If the claimants, however, refer to that party in Indiana that is making its battle under the leadership of Tom Taggart of the notorious French Lick gambling resort, Crawford Fairbanks of the Terre Haute Brewing company and Albert Lieber of the American Brewing company," he added, "I will say that it is to meet a most signal defeat in Indiana this fall. The issue is principally local, and I do not believe that the people of the state will vote for candidates whose principal supporters are the avowed agents of the saloon interests."

"Bryan Not Thought Of."

"Bryan, and all of his talk about bank guarantees and the use of injunctions, are not thought of," declared the Indiana senator. "Bryan is an almost forgotten figure, and it has been taken for granted that he would be the candidate. His issues are entirely overshadowed by those of immediate local interest in which Taggart is the towering figure. The fight in Indiana this year is being fought between the people, who demand certain restrictive legislation against the liquor trade, and the so-called democratic party, which is giving all its strength to the support of the brewers and distillers who are opposed to such legislation."

THE ROUNDERS SAYS

A NIGHT RIDER IN HAMMOND.

A man got on the street car at East Chicago at about 10 p. m. and rode through to Hammond. At the corners of Hohman and State streets the conductor noticed that he had gone to sleep and taking hold of his shoulder shook him and said: "This is Hammond, do you want to get off here?"

"Do you want to go to East Hammond?" asked the conductor. "Now looked here," said the man, "the street car is the best I can do in the way of an automobile and if I want to make a pleasure trip to the Standard Steel car plant that is my business, is it not?"

"This is rather a funny time of the night to make a trip for pleasure," said the conductor, laughing. "Well," said the night rider, "I am going out to see if I can't open the plant tomorrow and if I can't open it tomorrow I won't open it at all." So saying, he exclaimed: "She's a grand old rag," and went back to sleep.

"A man came into one of these places the other morning," said the drummer, "and happened to sit at my table. He ground his teeth and growled at the waiter: 'Bring me No. 1 ten times!' he shouted."

"When the forty slices of bacon, twenty fried eggs and ten cups of coffee appeared he growled: 'Well, for once I'm going to get enough samples to make me think I'm getting something to eat.'"

"But even when he got all the samples, with the 100 pounds of dishware and the molecular dabs of food, he had
