Misses Duncan and Edna Kreis saw "The Yankee Prince" at the Colonial in Chicago this afternoon.

END OF THE TRAIL.

When all the love, hate, comedy and tragedy that one can imagine is crowded into one short play, it goes without saying that the production must be exceptionally good. Such a play is the great western tale of "The End of the Trail," which F. F. Jackson will produce at Towle opera house four nights, beginning Sunday matinee, Oct. 4. It is full of unexpected climaxes and unlooked for denouements and each and every person in the audience is sure to find something of heart interest to him or her. The atmosphere of the breezy plains of the west pervades the whole story to such an extent that one can almost scent the alpha and alkali dust in one's nostrils.

THE ROUNDIER SAYS

Uncle Henry Bicknell was telling about the Blaine campaign several years ago. At that time Mr. Bicknell was president of the Garret Republican club and in that capacity it was his duty to look after the speakers who were assigned to the city.

One day the county chairman received word that a speaker by the name of J. Milton Turner had been assigned to Garret. A committee was sent to the depot to meet the speaker and escort him to the hotel. When they came back one of them said to Bicknell: "Have you seen the speaker?"

Bicknell admitted that he had not. "Well he is as black as the ace of spades," was the information which was imparted to the president of the Garret Republican club.

Uncle Henry was about the maddest man in DeKalb county. To think that the state committee had palmed off a negro speaker on a city which did not have more than one negro in it was too much for the Garret druggist.

However, it was decided to make the best of a bad bargain and not let the democrats know that they were put out about it.

It was not long before Bicknell heard that the democrats had the Hon. J. Milton Turner corralled in a saloon and it was rumored that they were trying to get him drunk.

Bicknell sent a good republican down to see how the speaker was getting along. The investigator returned and said: "The negro is all right, but the democrats are all drunk."

Then came the torchlight parade. Uncle Henry Bicknell and the county chairman were compelled to march along on either side of the negro. "Talk about making sacrifices for the party," said Bicknell, in telling about it.

The negro made a great speech. In fact it was better than one made by the candidate for the vice presidency the next day. After the meeting it devolved upon Mr. Bicknell to take the speaker to the station. He did not get him there until after he had made great inroads on Druggist Bicknell's supply of spirits.

On the way to the station Bicknell met the committee of democrats who were coming from the depot with the candidate for the vice presidency. They gave Bicknell the laugh and, of course, he had but one way of relieving his feelings and he used that to the limit.

Young Republicans of Hammond: Have you heard your father tell of the great campaigns of the past. Have you heard him speak of the great campaigns of twenty years ago when hundreds of marching men kept step to martial music. Have you heard him tell of the days when he was a young man and marched in line with a torch across his shoulder or perhaps an illuminated sign which bore a terse inscription regarding the issues of the day.

That was an old-fashioned campaign. And that is just the kind of campaigning that is being done in Hammond today. It is an inspiring sight to see such a spectacle. It is an inspiration to be a part of it. The young man of today who does not take a part in this great business of electing a president is missing one of the experiences of a life time.

The republican party makes a peculiar appeal to the young man. Its constructive policy, the fact that through it the administrative policies of this great government have been developed and will be developed make it the party to appeal to the young man. Every young republican should show his republicanism by at least marching in the parade. Every old republican should hold to re-enact the scenes of the old days.

Dr. and Mrs. J. Arthur Davis will spend Sunday with relatives in Chicago.

The Ginger Jar

One month from today we hope to read the last campaign lie.

They insist on misspelling it, however. One man, who is a republican candidate for a North township office—not meaning Mr. Escher—upon being shown the omission on the banner, omitted his familiar haw-haw and remarked between gasps: "You're right; that's wrong. It should be spelled K-o-o-v-e-n-E-r."

They say that they have an incorrigible lad in Gary. It might be well to save that specimen for practical use when the Lake County Teachers' association meets in Hammond.

The agony is about over. Now for the post-series. Then the election and finally the funds who keeps "dingling" at you: "Do your Christmas shopping early."

Nick Bick is going into the shoe business. He became "well heeled" as a photographer, however.

What's on tonight? Watson. Roosevelt, Bryan and Taft. Front, editorial and aft. I'd like to read a story.

But it's all politics, by gory. It is fairly reasonable to presume that Pigeon-in-the-Roost or Woods-Around-the-Pigeon, or whatever Dr. Calver's name may be for his new town at Griffith, that it will not have the marvelous growth that Gary has enjoyed.

Nobody is ever going to question that our present representative in the legislature is not a Simon-pure democrat.

TENTH ANNUAL REUNION.

mainder of the afternoon session will be given over to a social session. The evening session will be a camp fire at the K. of P. hall at 7:30 p. m. The president of the association, Captain Joseph Turnock of South Bend will preside. The program will be as follows:

The Program.

1. Call to order.

2. Prayer by Rev. Elliot, chaplain of the department of Indiana.

3. Piano duet by Mrs. Minard and Miss Margaret Trimble.

4. Patriotic address by Joseph Conroy.

5. Address by comrades.

6. Patriotic instruction by Dr. Mary E. Jackson.

7. Violin and piano duet by Miss Margaret Trimble and Elliot Conroy.

8. Reading.

9. Sparks from the national encampment by Chaplain Elliot and others.

10. Scarf drill by ten young girls.

The sessions of the next day will be devoted to business. There will be a business meeting at 8:30 in the morning. Reports of the retiring officers will be received. Reports of the committees will be asked for. The election of officers and the selection of the next place of meeting will be done. Unfinished business will then be taken up and after the farewells there will be an adjournment. The citizens of Hammond are cordially invited to attend the meetings.
