Mrs. Dyer is entertaining twenty-eight guests, the members of the Embroidery club, of which Miss Crumpacker is a member, and a few other friends.

"THE COWBOY GIRL."
"The Cowboy Girl" is the sort of a play that is melodramatic in story and action, full of pleasing music and merry quips. The keynote of the piece is diversion, and to this end Kilroy and Britton have employed the catchiest music, the brightest dialogue, and the handsomest girls to appear in the musical ensembles. The production is also superbly staged and costumed and represents the newest idea in theatricals in every particular. A big melodramatic play with a musical comedy flavor. "The Cowboy Girl" will hold the boards of the Towle opera house three days and Saturday matinee, commencing Thursday, October 15.

MISS CRUMPACKER ENTERTAINED.
A novel party, at which Miss Agnes Melkie was hostess, was given last evening in honor of Miss Harriet Crumpacker at the home of Miss Melkie in South Hohman street. The large Melkie residence in Homewood was converted into a school room for the pleasure of the guests over which Mrs. Harvey Gostlin presided as teacher. The guests, or pupils, were received between 8 and 9 o'clock and the school session opened at 9. The pupils were interviewed and put into classes, after which the recitations began. Each young lady took part in the school program and their recitations, chorus and solo work caused a great deal of merriment. The program included a course in needle work and at this period the class handed out clothes and worked the initial "H." These were given Miss Crumpacker as gifts. At the close of the session the teacher in charge presented Miss Crumpacker with a diploma showing that she had graduated from the school of courtship. The school closed at this hour and during the intermission, which followed Miss Irene Mott, played the wedding march and the guests found their places at the initial "H." "JANE EYRE."
Rowland & Clifford's latest production is Peter G. Piatti's dramatization of Charlotte Bronte's popular novel, "Jane Eyre."

This play is so intensely human that it holds something of interest for theatergoers of every class. The characters are true to life, hence lovable and easily sympathized with. None of the little shortcomings so prevalent in all of us have been rubbed away for passing effect, so every character is palpitating and interesting because of this very humanity, which is the keynote of this truly fine play. A superb company, equally balanced in all its units, has been specially selected to interpret each part, and they give a performance thoroughly in harmony with the author's conception of each individual character. This performance is meeting with unqualified success everywhere. "Jane Eyre" will be presented at the Towle opera house Sunday matinee and night, October 18.

Prof. Leaming had charge of chapel this morning and he rendered a solo. It was a serenade by Shakespeare, entitled "Blow, Blow Thou Winter Wind."

Whiting has backed down. No game could be scheduled with the team. They would not even play the second team. From reports received they have a very light team, so this accounts for their refusing to play Hammond.

The football squad held a meeting in the laboratory after dismissal to consider with Coach Allee and Manager McElroy about going to Waukegan next Saturday. The boys were all in favor of going and if the game can be successfully arranged Hammond will play Waukegan next Saturday at the latter place. The meeting adjourned with each one taking a shoot down the fire escape.

Elkhart beat Waukegan by 10 to 0 and Michigan City by 21 to 0. Hammond beat Michigan City 11 to 5. So Hammond and Waukegan are pretty evenly matched.

SPLENDID SPEECH AT BROOKS.

the south improving the condition of labor there.

He showed how many of the owners of cotton mills were making their fortune from the New England states where labor is paid good wages and where the laborer is protected, to the south where labor is cheaper and where the law does not compel them to safeguard the health of their employees.

By the time Mr. Crumpacker was through with Mr. Campers he showed him up in his true light. Not as the great friend of labor the impartial head of the American Federation of Labor, one of the greatest organizations of its kind in the world, but as a partisan democrat who did not recognize anything that the republican party has done for labor.

Even John Sharp Williams, the leader of the democratic minority in the house, admitted that in the land where, according to Mr. Bryan, "THE PEOPLE RULE," labor conditions were worse than in other parts of the country.

Has "Dangerous Radicalism." Mr. Bryan's "dangerous radicalism" was shown when he declared that the paramount issue of the campaign is the guarantee of bank deposits. It did not take Mr. Crumpacker long to explode that theory.

If Bryan had his way the people of Hammond and Crown Point, who had put their savings in the local banks, would have to make good the losses which resulted from the failure of the Hazen and other banks in New York caused by ruinous speculation.

If the deposits in banks were guaranteed by the government it would not make any difference what kind of bankers were running the financial institutions of the country.

A crook, who could get a little money together, would be just as capable of starting a bank as the man who had built up a reputation for integrity through scores of years of right living and square dealing.

The people's money would be safe in the crooks' bank, but the people who had placed their savings in the bank run by the honest banker, would have to make good the losses.

Such a condition of affairs would demoralize the whole banking system of the country.

Shows Up Fallacies.
Then Mr. Crumpacker went about the pleasant task of showing up some of the fallacies of the Peerless Leader.

He told about Mr. Bryan's ownership dream and how he awoke to find it impractical and how he, with the republicans, is now willing to regulate instead of own the railroads.

Mr. Crumpacker ended his address with an appeal to the voters to elect William H. Kliver and Edward Wickey to congress, so that there would be no danger that United States Senator Hemenway would be returned to the senate.

"As for myself," said Mr. Crumpacker, "I will leave that to you."

Peddler's Horse Stolen.

The Hammond police received word today that Morris Finklestein of this city drove to Gary with a horse which was billed and was up in other ways, and when Finklestein went in to get some old rags he returned and found his horse and wagon missing.

The only theory the police have of the theft is that some one thought they could sell the animal to some rendering company for a small consideration.

TELL OF CARING FOR INJURED.

Dr. G. F. Beasley Points Out Importance of Transportation Following Railway Accidents.

Methods of caring for persons injured in railway accidents were discussed by members of the American Association of Railway Surgeons which began a three days' session at the Palmer house in Chicago yesterday.

"The transportation of the injured persons," he said, "means much for the ultimate success of the treatment. The first aid in stopping the flow of blood is essential, after which getting a patient to a hospital for treatment follows."

In the afternoon papers were read on surgical operations. The feature of the session today will be a symposium on primary dressing of wounds. The convention will close Friday afternoon with the election of officers and reading of technical papers. One hundred and forty members are attending the meeting.
