DOING THEIR DUTY

To filter the blood is the kidneys' duty.

When they fail to do this the kidneys are sick.

Backache and many kidney ills follow:

Urinary troubles, diabetes.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure them all.

Hammond people endorse our claim.

Mrs. J. W. Addy of 307 Indiana avenue, Hammond, says: "Why will women suffer from kidney disease and other allied troubles when they can obtain such a grand remedy as Doan's Kidney Pills. Perhaps they were like myself. I felt weak and miserable for a long time but never stopped to ask myself the question, 'Are my kidneys the cause of my trouble?' I went right on suffering until at last I had to seek relief. I gave every remedy I thought would help me, a trial, but without being benefited in the least. Finally I heard about Doan's Kidney Pills and how many cases of kidney diseases they had cured, after doctors had failed. I decided to try them and procured a box at Blackwell & Co.'s drug store. I improved soon after I began taking them, and before I had finished the contents of one box the benefit I had received was unmistakable. I used in all three boxes and by that time I was cured. I advise all suffering as I did to try Doan's Kidney Pills."

TOLESTON.

Gary Heat, Light and Water company had a representative make a house-to-house campaign here the other day whose object was to find out how many prospective gas users he could get to sign a petition requesting the above named company to extend its gas mains into Tolleston. We do not know how successful he was, but think it would be a boon to the town, especially in the hot months of summer when gas can be so conveniently used for cooking purposes. Let all loyal and progressive citizens help the good cause along.

WHITING NEWS

Battling Has an Experience.

Battling Nelson got in wrong on his trip to Whiting on Monday.

"Bat" was looking for the residence of Warren Renne, which is at Central avenue and One Hundred and Eighteen street, and where he was to have been entertained. Going down Laporte avenue, which is one block east, he went into the house he thought to be the Renne home. Going up the stairs he pressed the door bell, but there was no response. After doing this for some moments he evidently began to think he had been stung, being invited to a house and to find no one at home. Putting his card under the door he went to the next house and asked the lady who came to the door whether or not Renne, next door, was at home. The lady informed him that the Renne family did not live next door, but one block west. The pugilist was certainly surprised to find out that he had been mistaken, and told the woman he wished he could apologize for leaving his card under the door of her next door neighbor.

Not many moments elapsed before the mistress of the house returned home. Having been to the store she had her arms full of bundles, and when unlocking the door she saw the card on the floor. Going to the next room to put the articles on the table she returned to get the card to learn who had called upon her during her short absence.

Picking up the card she was amazed to see "Battling Nelson, Champion Lightweight of the World." After pondering over the incident for some moments she went next door and told her neighbor of finding Nelson's card under the door, and said she thought she had better dress up in armor to prepare for his return.

It was then that the two stories were put together and the true facts were sifted out, that Nelson had called at house No. 1 by mistake and that the mistress of house No. 2 was engaged in conversation with none other than the champion lightweight of the world.

The incident has passed around the neighborhood and whenever housewives in the vicinity of One Hundred and Eighteen street and Laporte avenue hear of Battling Nelson's mistake of the card will be rehearsed.
