

LIVE NEWS FROM THE TWIN CITIES

CORONER'S INQUEST

Lack of time yesterday caused a continuation of the coroner's inquest into the death of Frank McLaughlin, the popular East Chicago school teacher, who was killed a few weeks ago, when he was struck by a taxi. The hearing will be completed next Monday. Harper, the driver of the taxi, was not called to testify yesterday but will probably be the first heard from next Monday.

The inquest into the death of Louis Kish who met his death at the same corner as McLaughlin a few nights previous to the automobile accident, was completed but Deputy Coroner Dr. P. J. Townsley has not yet rendered a decision. Kish died from a fractured skull which he received, testimony showed, when he stepped from a moving car and fell striking his head.

SEEK SEWAGE DISPOSAL PLANT

The East Chicago Chamber of Commerce yesterday discussed sewage disposal and housing facilities in their joint meeting at the Congregational Church. The Chamber went on record as favoring immediate construction of a sewage disposal plant to be built and maintained by the city of East Chicago and not to be part of a sanitary district such as has been proposed for the Calumet region.

The action was somewhat of a rebuff to the commercial organizations of Hammond and Whiting who had asked for

Has Your Wife
What These Women Have?

Certain cards in our index of savings accounts contain the names of Indiana Harbor women who have their own bank books.

The increasing number of these cards in our files means that more Indiana Harbor men are recognizing the value of their wives having separate saving accounts.

These wives, who have their own bank books—who receive a definite sum each pay day to put in the bank or who manage to find a chance now and then to put a dollar or two in the bank—do wonders with their savings. For instance, it gives many of them a chance to have better clothes. Others are saving to make the first payment on their own home. Still others look forward to the day when an automobile can be bought. All find the savings account an incentive worth while.
