HATS WITH BRIMS WILL TAKE PLACE OF SMALL TURBANS FOR LATE SUMMER WEAR

Turbans will not swing the pendulum of fashion this season. Even now when they are popular for street wear and afternoon wear they are not the dominating fashion of the hour. Although the small hat always has a place and appears to possess the power to remain fashionable in all seasons the hat with a brim of some kind will surely lead all others when real summer arrives. Just now hats with brims are having great vogue at the southern colonies. Here are two pretty styles which will be good for wear all through the summer season. The one above is fashioned of tan straw fabric trimmed with old rose. The old rose binds the brim and forms a band about the crown and embroidery in the same shade that trims the crown. The other hat is a smart little sailor shape with a turned up brim. It is henna and the facing taupe. A band of the two colors of straw is braided about the crown.
