What Women Voters Want In Politics

BY MILDRED DORRIS

WASHINGTON, April 17.—Asked the question, "What do the women voters want?" Representatives of various political beliefs have given answers that may be summed up as follows:

A settlement of international questions that will guarantee future peace.

Removal of all sex discriminations in laws, politics and industry.

Drastic measures to reduce the cost of living.

Protective legislation for women and children.

All declared that presidential candidates seeking the woman vote must make these the principal issues in the campaign.

The consensus of opinion expressed was that the league of nations would be a bigger issue with the women than any other.

"This is because we can have no peace until the international dispute is settled," said Mrs. Abby Scott Baker, political chairman of the National Woman's Party. "I do not say that the women want the president's league of nations. No one who has travelled through the country and sounded their sentiment has any doubt that they intend to register at the polls a demand for some sort of international agreement that will stop future wars."

"The women do not want any more wars—that is the great mass of them—not for it is the women who bear the brunt of wars. For that reason I do not think a military man or a candidate who stands for militarism will have any chance with the women voters."

According to Miss George Bass, Chicago, chairman of the women's bureau of the national democratic commission, it is the president's league of nations that they want.

"I do not say this because I believe in the president's league of nations," said Mrs. Bass. "I'm simply reporting the sentiment of women all over the country—women of all political faiths."

"It amazed me to find that the women were more interested in international issues than in the domestic problems. They understand that we can have no adjustment of our own problems until those of the remainder of the world are settled, and we can have no peace until there is a guarantee that wars will be stopped. The high cost of living, everything, is more or less the result of the unsettled state of things. This the women realize and reports coming from all sections of the country show a big sentiment among them for the ratification of the peace treaty."

Said Mrs. Helen H. Gardner, the first woman appointed to the U. S. civil service commission, a vice president of the National Woman's Suffrage Association and counselor of the League of Women Voters:

"The women want the things that will make the world better for their boys and girls. The candidate who will get their votes will be the man who stands for these things. For women and children, they want a guarantee against wars; they want equal opportunity for women in every thing and they want action, against profiteers in the necessities of life and they will vote for these things regardless of party."

Speaking for the farm women of the country, Mrs. Benigna Green Kaib of Houston, Texas, secretary of the Farm Women's National Congress, declared they would universally register protest against militarism.

"They do not want a military president, nor do the women of the country generally," Mrs. Kaib said. "The farm women of the country are divided into classes just as the city women. Their viewpoint on some things differ from that of their city sisters. They demand a reduction in the cost of living, but insist that it shall not be brought about at the expense of the farmer. They want laws that will encourage co-operative trading—eliminating the middleman, and there is a strong sentiment among them for national control of the pack, industry, the railroads and other public utilities because they believe all this will help to reduce the cost of living."

Said Mrs. Helen H. Gardner, the first woman appointed to the U. S. civil service commission, a vice president of the National Woman's Suffrage Association and counselor of the League of Women Voters:

"The women want the things that will make the world better for their boys and girls. The candidate who will get their votes will be the man who stands for these things. For women and children, they want a guarantee against wars; they want equal opportunity for women in every thing and they want action, against profiteers in the necessities of life and they will vote for these things regardless of party."

NEW BASIS FOR WORK SEEN IN HAMMOND PLANT

The manufacture of 1200 sizes in gears of iron, steel, and brass, representing designs for bevel, spur, miter, and spiral gears. Other products of the plant to be manufactured on machines of the company's own invention consist of automobile parts, nut and bolt assemblies, and a feature of which is said to be that they never rust or wear out, burrless proof screens, locks and guides, and other patents of D. A. Johnson, inventor for the company and one of the founders.

One of the leading products of the company is the manufacture of the Eclipse Manufacturing Company will be special sanding machines for both metal and wood. D. A. Johnson spent over three years, he says, in developing this patent. Woodworking of all kinds will be advanced a quarter century by this device which accomplishes the work of four men and turns out products infinitely superior to hand-made. It is said that the machine is the only one of its type in the United States.

The architect of the structure, A. C. Berry, who is also a founder of the company, has completed in his plans of the building what fellow architects and builders concede is a masterpiece of factory planning. For economy of space, beauty of construction, and simplicity of design the building, it is said, will become a model for similar enterprises.

The first floor, south end, will comprise the main machine shop. Here there will be erected 12-foot lathes, shapers, planers, milling and boring machines. The north half of the first floor will be devoted to the shipping room, packing room, and coal and boiler rooms. Two enormous Brown hoist electric cranes of the latest design will be used to move material from one end of the shop to the other. All motive power will be electric.

Because of the height of the machines on the main floor, it will be necessary to construct a mezzanine floor, where additional small machines, and a plating department will be installed.

The second, third and fourth floors will be used by the patented machines manufactured on the first floor. With these machines, according to officials, the company will turn out finished products faster and of better quality than any wood-working or metal shop in the country where the present method of hand-shaping and designing is still in vogue.

Alleged failure of the Western Union Telegraph Co. to deliver $2,000 to the Banca Nationala at Bucharest, Roumania is the basis of a suit for damages which has been filed by Constantin Titian against the company in the Hammond superior court. Titian says that on July 3, 1919, he paid the telegraph company $2,000 and the defendant had agreed to transmit it to the bank in Roumania. He charges that the money was not delivered to the bank and has not been returned to him. He asks for judgment for $2,500 covering interest on the money and attorney fees. Bomberger, Peters and Morthland are his attorneys.
