

GREATEST POWER TEST IS COMING

British Officials Say They Are Not Over Optimistic

By DAVID M. CHURCH
(STAFF CORRESPONDENT I. N. SERVICE)
LONDON, March 31.—The greatest test of power that the Dublin and Belfast governments will have undergone yet confronted them today in the enforcement of the Irish peace agreement signed here last night by representatives of North and South Ireland and the British government.

British officials, while hopeful that the agreement would restore Irish unity, were not over-optimistic. After attaching his signature to the document, Michael Collins, of the Irish provisional government, said that it would surely restore Irish tranquility if it were carried out in the same spirit in which it was signed.

The agreement was favorably received by the press. The Times called it "a beacon guiding Irishmen from the tempests of centuries into a safe haven of united brotherhood."

The chief features of the agreement are:

1. Protection of the Catholic residents of Northern Ireland.
2. Irish republican army to cease its activities on the Ulster border.
3. Mixed police force to be formed in Ulster, composed of half Catholics and half Protestants.
4. Another conference on Irish unity to be held later.

"Thank God for that," exclaimed Sir Hamar Greenwood, chief secretary for Ireland, when he heard that the agreement was signed. His words seemed to sum up the sentiment of the whole nation. Parliament received news of the agreement with great enthusiasm.

Joseph Devlin, M. P., paid tribute to Colonial Secretary Winston

GAS EMPLOYES AND FRIENDS HEAR LECTURE

Harry Newman Tolles, President of the Sheldon School, spoke at the annual Employees Rally of the Northern Indiana Gas and Electric Company, in the Chamber of Commerce rooms last night.

The rally, in spite of the bad weather, was better attended than any meeting ever previously staged by the Northern Indiana Gas and Electric Co. Over four hundred employees, their relatives and friends were entertained. Owing to the courtesy of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, a first-class radio concert was given. This was supplemented by moving pictures supplied by the General Electric Company and the American Gas Association which were both educational and interesting to the assembly. Community singing contributed to the success of the evening which concluded with an ample and ably prepared luncheon served in cafeteria style.

He said in part:

"The family in the home is as much a part of the business family as those members of it who have their names on the pay-roll."

"The success of any company is nothing more or less than the sum total of the successes of all individuals in that company."

"No man can stand up and say he is independent, and no man need feel that he is dependent for we are all inter-dependent."

"For fifteen years, as modern Diogenes, I have been travelling around searching for a man who wanted to talk. I am still looking."

"Statistics show that of an average normal group of one hundred men, age twenty-five years, in forty years time three are dead, fifty-four are dead-beats, five are completely dependent on their pay, four are rich enough to be independent of their work and one is wealthy."

Churchill, saying that his "superb tact and ability" brought about an agreement desired for centuries.
