SHORT CHATS WITH MERCHANTS.

(Farmer's Guide.)

The next best thing to profiting by your advertising mistakes is not to make any.

Just be reasonably fair with the press and the press will be fair with your obituary.

It takes a good advertising man to be a good business man. Think this over and think hard.

Things would be more pleasant if the chronic kickers were compelled to do things themselves.

The crank in business soon gets to the place where an obituary is the best notice the business can have.

When writing the advertising copy remember it is well to weigh your words if you want the message to carry weight.

There may be plenty of room at the top, but you have to get at the bottom of every failure to profit by experience.

Unless you keep the record of your effort fairly good, it is hardly fair to find too much fault with others.

When things seem not to be coming your way, your first thought should be: Am I keeping myself out of the way of things?

You have reached a very dangerous point when you have so much confidence in yourself that you have no confidence in advertising.

Many a man is so intent upon cultivating customers' trade that he overlooks the importance of winning their confidence. Confidence is the first rung on the ladder of business success.

Too many cooks spoil the broth;
Too many clerks spoil the store;
Too many goods will spoil the shelf;
Advertising keeps both well regulated.

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION.

The vocational educational convention held in Indianapolis has been an education in itself to the people of Indiana. It has opened the eyes of all the people to what has been and is being accomplished in our state under the present state administration. Experts and leaders in vocational education in other states have been among the speakers. In personal interviews as well as in their public discussions they have declared that Indiana is far ahead of any state in the Union in this work, notwithstanding the fact that it has been comparatively recently undertaken here on a large and general scale. Indiana has been accepted as the model of the states.

Its Subsoiling Feature Alone Will Pay For A "BIG BULL" Tractor

the first season. You know the value of subsoiling. You know it enables the soil to absorb, store up and hold more moisture for dry spells and drain better during excessive rainy spells. It reduces the chances of ruination of your crop by drouth. It insures larger crop yields.

The "Big Bull" Subsoils with Its Bull Wheel

because the bull wheel runs in the furrow and is studded with "spade" lugs 3 1/2" to 5" long. These lugs dig into the hardpan or plowsole made by horses and plow shares and tear it loose to a depth of 3 to 5 inches. This is "the best way of subsoiling known up to the present time," concludes Owney Meyers, Brookston, Ind. Reports from hundreds of Bull Tractor owners, on file at the factory office, show an average

Increased Crop Yield of 22%

The range was from 10% to 33 1/2%. Some used horses, some used other tractors before they got their Big Bull Tractors. In both instances there were increased yields.

Another advantage of this patented "Big Bull" feature is better traction. "The Bull" therefore needs less power to do the same work and this means cheaper operation," says G. C. Roundy, Aberdeen, S. D. "I would not do without this feature at any price," wrote Ed. Prichard, Terrell, La.

"The Speed of the 'Big Bull'"

—without overheating, is another thing that puts it in a class by itself in my estimation," writes S. R. Conner, Pauls Valley, Okla. It is not the number of plows you pull, but the number of acres you plow that counts. "In comparing the power of two tractors the speed at which they are moving must always be considered," says the experts of the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture in their Weekly News Letter of January 26, 1916.

Now then, figure out for yourself what it would mean to you in dollars and cents to have your crop increased, say even 10% (a very conservative estimate).

Note how close this gain would come to paying for a Big Bull the first season, or how much you would have left over its cost as clear profit.

The price of the Big Bull, f. o. b. Minneapolis, is $645

The Bull Tractor Guaranty and Service goes with it.

Then come in and let us tell you in how many other ways you will be money ahead by doing your plowing and other farm work with a Big Bull.
