

How a Dry Joker was Joked.

At the name of Cale Meeks, what reminiscences pass before our mental vision! Old recollections come crowding upon us, and we see an array of the "old" before our mind's eye, in the shape of seekers of the mythical Frank McLaughlin, the victims of croton oil and jalap, and for the administration of which no medical reason existed, and a long line of those who have been humbugged generally, without any specific species of "sell." Cale was the prince of dry jokers; he lived, moved and had his being, through a diurnal succession of "sells," indeed his life was one great sell, composed of a conglomeration of the infinitesimal sells of fifty years duration. Now, Nixby—Nathan Nixby—was one of Cale's truest and staunchest business acquaintances, though he had never been introduced into the domestic circle made glad by the presence of Mrs. Cale, who was somewhat addicted to jealousy. The reason for this lack of acquaintance was that she lived a secluded life in one of the little villages of Long Island, and Nat Nixby lived in our babel of New York. Well, one day Cale was hard pushed for an object upon which to inflict a practical joke, and in his dilemma selected his friend Nat as his victim.

The manner in which Nat was sold I do not choose to particularly describe; suffice it to say that, under the play of Cale's exuberant fancy, Nat made a journey to Albany, and insisted that a lady there sent him an amatory epistle, which he produced. The lady became indignant, called in the aid of her husband, who literally skinned Mr. Nat Nixby, who thereafter returned to Gotham with a very adult flea in his anorectal apparatus. This event happened in the early spring time, and on a beautiful day, about a week after Nat's return from Albany, he met Cale at Sherwood's. This sell was disclosed by Cale, and a hearty laugh was had over Nat's mishap, and at his still bruised features, in which he joined; but those present noticed the fact that he did not laugh an inch below his chin; in truth, it was generally believed that Nat's mirth was entirely stimulated.

"Now, old fellow," said Cale, "you don't hold any malice, do you?" "Not a bit," answered Nat, "and in token of amity, let us take a smile all around," which they did in the usual manner.

"How did you come to town?" asked Nat.

"I drove up in a light wagon," replied Cale.

"And when will you return home?" "About six o'clock this evening," responded.

Nat thereupon pleaded an engagement, and left; but as soon as he was out of eye-sight of his joking friend, repaired to Gray's stable, in Warren-st., where he hired a fast horse and light vehicle, and started, through a by-street, for the residence of his friend Cale, on Long Island.

On arriving, he left his horse and wagon at a public house, and proceeded to the aforesaid residence, where he inquired of the servant if Meeks was at home. On being answered, as he knew he would be, in the negative, he said:

"This is unfortunate. I wanted to pay him some money. If I could see Mrs. Meeks it would do as well, as she could give me a receipt in the name of her husband."

Mrs. M. was frugal and industrious, and always attentive to her husband's interests. As the last remark fell from the lips of Nat, a fine looking matron called, from up the stairs, "show the gentlemen into the parlor," where she followed in a few moments. Nat bowed and said:

"I desired to see Mr. Meeks, madam."

"Very well," replied she, "I am Mrs. Meeks."

"Pardon me, madam," said Nat, with a doubtful shake of the head; "but this is a matter of some importance—the payment of money; and you are not the lady Mr. Meeks introduced to me as his wife, last winter!"

"Not the lady? what?" shrieked she.

"Do you mean to tell me that—"

"I simply tell you, madam," replied Nat, with icy imperturbability, "that Mr. Meeks, last winter, in Broadway near Leonard street, introduced me to a lady whom he called Mrs. Meeks, and you are not the lady."

"Indeed!" exclaimed Mrs. Meeks, her eyes flashing fire: "How old was she?"

"Well, about twenty-five."

"Twenty-five! And how was she dressed?"

"She wore her hair in ringlets, had diamond ear-rings—"

the greatest amiability, and exemplified that he was at peace with "all the world and the rest of mankind."

In a brief space of time Cale's steed was given into the charge of a stable-boy, and unconscious and happy, he entered his domicile and shut the door. The moment he entered and attentive ear might have detected the sounds of a voice in no way mellow or expressive of endearment; and an instant after Cale hurriedly came through the door, with amazement on his front and a mop in his rear, the wrong end of which was under the direct and personal superintendence of a lady who was very red in the face and sturdy in the arms, and who strongly resembled Mrs. Meeks. The battle had commenced in the passage way. Cale's castor, which shone in the rays of the setting sun as he drove down the road, was now very much bruised and out of shape; indeed it was driven far down over Cale's azalea physiognomy.

"What in thunder's out," yelled Cale.

"Twenty-five years old!" shrieked the infuriated dame, and bang, Cale caught the mop over the shoulders—"Corkscrew ringlets!" and punk he got it on the back, with all the strength which nature and anger had given to the enraged lady.

"Don't, I don't do that!"

But it was of no use, he had to take it.

"Diamond ear-rings!" punk! "Silk velvet dresses!" bang! "Gold bracelets!" slump!

"Murder," roared Cale.

"Watch and!" she shrieked, and biff! he took it over the head.

"Muf!" bang! slump! "Boa!" bang! bang! and down went Cale with a yell of "Murder!"

Now fell the blows thick and fast upon the bruised head, back and face of the prostrate joker; while the lady again rehearsed the catalogue of the wearing apparel and jewels of the other Mrs. Meeks, timing the utterance of the name of each article with a blow upon her prostrate, writhing and bleeding lord.

But all things must have an end.—The violent exercise of the arms and lungs, in which Mrs. Meeks had indulged, had somewhat exhausted her. She had thrice run through Nat's imaginary catalogue, and feeling her strength departing, gathered herself up for one grand and final effort. Cale looked with horror upon the upraised mop; he heard the words:

"O, the huzz!" shouted in a vigorous tone. He heard a hurrying, whizzing sound in the air, and the next instant Cale's nose was as flat as the other parts of Cale's face. His two tormentors retreated into the mansion, and left him alone with his gore. Slowly and with the most keen sensations of pain, he raised himself into a sitting posture, and with many a groan of agony, proceeded to the inspection of his personal condition.

"I'm d—d if this arm ain't broken! Oh! and this left shoulder must be dislocated! Oh! oh! And good God! what a nose! That woman must be crazy! I shan't be able to go about in a month! Oh, Lord, how sore I am!"

Now Nat, with the most pleasurable emotions had, through the crevice of the fence, observed the whole of this little family jar which I have so freely described; and he now stood looking over the fence, at the back of his friend Cale.

"I say, Uncle Cale!" shouted Nat.

"Hey!" said Cale, as he turned in some little astonishment a look upon his former victim.

"I say, Cale," continued Nat, "how do you feel about now?"

"Oh, you—!" I shall leave it blank," yelled out the enraged Cale, as he sprang to his feet and made for the house; "I'll fix your flint!"

But Nat didn't want the flint fixed, and therefore made his way with great celerity up the road.

Soon after there appeared upon the green sward, rendered sanguinary and sacred by these conjugal endearments, a lame man, who wore a shocking bad hat, and who had taken possession of a fowling-piece loaded with buck shot.—If the lame man meant to shoot Nat, he reckoned without his host. That worthy, thanks to a long and thin pair of legs, was out of gun-shot range.

Cale, from that time forth, and until he filled the grave which he now occupies so well, eschewed dry joking, and was always sensitive of the subject of mops.

Irving's Life of Washington

ILLUSTRATED! GREAT inducements for Clubs. Messrs. G. P. Putnam & Co., having now published the first volume of the Illustrated Edition of Irving's Life of Washington, being the complete life of Washington before the Revolution, are ready to furnish the same to subscribers free of postage on the receipt of $3.50 Single numbers sent post paid, to any part of the Union on receipt of 25 cts.

The following inducements are offered to clubs desiring to subscribe to this magnificent and national publication. Any person remitting four subscriptions for the first volume comprising 14 numbers will be entitled to five complete sets, delivered free of postage.—Clubs of six, remitting $21 dollars will be entitled to two extra copies of the volume or an extra copy of any other of Putnam & Co's publications of an equal value. Clubs of twelve remitting $42, will be entitled to four copies extra, or an extra copy of a complete set of Addison's works in six volumes, delivered free of postage. The same premiums will be given for a like number of subscriptions to the succeeding volumes. Each number of the Illustrated Washington will contain one and every other number two first class Steel Engravings or Maps. In addition to the Steel engravings, the work contains numerous elegant Wood engravings, illustrative of historical subjects.

CAUTION.—Persons subscribing for the Life of Washington should be particular to have the only work which must forever remain the standard authority. Irving's Life of Washington bears the imprint of G. P. Putnam & Co., the only publishers of Irving's Works.

"Every American should put this work side by side with his Bible on his book-shelf. Let your children read it, and learn by the example of the Great Washington, the lessons of patriotism, moral courage, perseverance and difficulties which the history of his life affords. No American should be without a copy of this work which we had rather own than this, it is worth a thousand of the trashy publications which the press is daily sending forth.—[Sci entific American.]

Country papers copying the above advertisement twice will receive a complete set of Putnam's Story Library.

PROSPECTUS OF THE THIRTY-SEVENTH VOLUME OF THE INDIANA STATE JOURNAL!

THE Journal is now entering its thirty-seventh volume. It was established in 1822, and is the oldest paper in Indiana. It is equal in age to the city of Indianapolis, and is nearly as old as our State Government. It was established when Indiana was little else than a wilderness, and when Indianapolis scarcely existed except in name. It has lived and grown upon its own merits—seldom receiving official patronage or governmental favors. Its name is as a "household word" throughout the length and breadth of the State, and its position upon all public matters—political or otherwise—is so well known that anything said in reference to its course upon any of the questions now before the people would be superfluous.

While the Journal will continue to advocate the great principles of freedom, and give its support to the Republican Party, as the party of the people—acting with the party when right and repudiating it when wrong—it will be for the coming year more of a family paper than it has ever been, and be made more acceptable to the general reader than a purely political paper could be.

The Session of Congress under a new Administration is always fraught with more or less importance to the welfare of the country and the present Session will be looked upon with feelings of peculiar interest. The position of the Administration upon Kansas affairs is a matter of much public concern. The Utah question and the progress of the anticipated war in that quarter, will be a subject of great public interest as long as it remains unsettled. Events are transpiring in our own country and throughout the world to make a newspaper indispensable to every individual.

Bounteous crops have blessed the husbandman throughout the land; peace, plenty and prosperity smile upon all, and we appear before the public, asking for its support, feeling that we shall receive it liberally. The past course of the Journal will be the best index of what the future will be, and promising to improve upon former efforts in producing an acceptable family and political newspaper, we submit our claims to a generous and intelligent people.

Terms:

One copy one year,..... 1 50 Ten copies one year, and one to the get- ter up of the club,..... 15 00 Twenty copies one year, to one address 20 00 Thirty five copies one year, to one address, and one to get up of club,..... 35 00 Fifty copies one year, to one address, and two to get up of club,..... 50 00

In Clubs of ten the name of each subscriber will be written on his paper, but in larger Clubs where the papers are sent for one dollar each, no name will be written on the papers, but the entire club sent to one person for him to distribute. This is the inevitable practice of all papers sending out Clubs at cheap rates, and cannot be departed from in any particular.

The Daily Journal, Will be sent by mail for $6 00 a year, or 50 cents a month. Address JOURNAL COMPANY, Indianapolis, Ind.
