Insects Infesting the Clover Seed Crop

Early in September word was received at the Experiment Station, from the northeastern part of the state, concerning certain insects, which were said to be doing considerable injury to the clover seed crop. The first one of these reports came from Huntington county. It was not long, however, before reports began to come in from other counties, and at the present time they are still coming showing very conclusively that the greater portion of the clover growing sections of the state have been visited.

The trouble was found to be due to the presence of one, and perhaps two species of insects which are often found infesting the seed of the red, white, alsike and crimson clovers and one of them at least also works alfalfa. As the same trouble is likely to occur again next year, a brief description of the habits, and some suggestions concerning preventive measures which may be employed, are here given.

The two species indicated above are the Clover-flower midge (Dasyneura leguminicola Link.) and the Clover-seed chalcid (Bruchophagus foveolatus How.). Both are very small flies. The first is a near relative to the wheat-midge, and resembles it quite closely, both in form and color. The other belongs to the family Chalcididae, a parasitic family, the members of which usually feed upon the eggs of other insects. The species mentioned here, however, is an exception to the rule.

These two species although belonging to different families, are often found together, and as their habits and time of working are so nearly identical, they may be treated together. They may be found working together in the same head, but not in the same flower, as the midge appears a few days earlier than the chalcid, and its larvae feed upon and destroy of the young ovules, thus precluding the presence of the other, which feeds only upon the growing seeds. In either case however, the eggs are deposited in the head of the clover, but the midge places hers upon the forming florets and the young larvae make their way into the ovaries, while the chalcid places her eggs directly into the already forming seeds, which the young larvae, as soon as hatched, proceed to "hollow out" by feeding upon the inside. (This has been the condition of most of the seed sent to us this fall.)

In this section there are two broods of each species in a season; the first brood of the midge appearing the latter part of May and the second the last of July. The first brood of the chalcid fly appears the fore part of June and the second the last of July and first of August. In both cases the first brood attack the first bloom, or hay crop, and the second the seed crop.

Practically the same remedies will apply to both species, so far as we now know. Early cutting of the clover hay crop as soon as it is in full bloom, will destroy most of the larvae. This can be done where clover is grown alone for seed, and not mixed with timothy. Early cutting will also tend to hasten the blooming period of the seed crop so that the blossoms will be too far advanced for much injury from the second brood, especially of the midge. Then, too, all volunteer clover should be clipped in the early stages of its blossoming period.

Fall plowing the clover field for corn the next spring, is also a good practice.

These two species, like the most of our insect enemies, have parasitic enemies which feed upon them, and which contribute very largely towards holding them in check. However, it is not well to depend upon these entirely, as it sometimes requires a couple of years for the parasites to develop in sufficient numbers to be able to make themselves felt. In the meantime these species will, in all probability continue to increase, so that for another year at least, it will be well to practice early cutting.

The clover-seed chalcid winters as a larva or pupa inside the seed, and will emerge from the seed stored in the barn, according to Professor Folsom of Urbana, Ill. The larvae will continue to work, therefore, in stored seed, until it has reached its pupa stage. The proper treatment of the seed therefore, which has been stored for the winter, would be to place the sacks in a tight box or bin (it should be air tight if possible) and then treat it with carbon bisulphide, by placing open dishes, filled with the material on the sacks and then closing the bin and leaving it for a couple of days. A half pound would be sufficient for ten or fifteen bushels.

Of All Things Hateful

Two women who had passed the three-score-and-five year mark were encountered in one week. Each looked her age; but the difference between the two was as wide as the universe.

One was quietly dressed and her hair pleasingly looped about her sweet and kind face. She spoke softly and only when she felt called upon for speech and she listened well.

She was tolerant and kind in her views of individuals and epochs.

She did not thrust her age upon the listener, but she spoke of events which had transpired during her lifetime and made no effort to seem younger than she looked.

She left the impression on those who encountered her of a fine garment which had been folded in sweet lavender.

The other woman was much bewigged and blazed with diamonds. Her face was as hard as flint; her eyes cold and critical.

There was not one vestige of youth or the charm of middle age about her personality. She was an old woman but she talked to women of thirty-five and forty as if she were their contemporary.

She dragged the subject of age into conversation continually; referring to it as something in the remote distance.

She spoke of younger women, especially those who were distinguished for their charms, with veiled criticism.

Scandal and unkind gossip she conveyed in adroit language; and always, after she ceased speaking, one felt as when the sting of a chill east wind has blown through an open window.

The young people of the day were characterized as ill-bred and vulgar; and life has referred to as a farce which must be endured; and disillusionment as a certain result of experience.

All that money could bestow had fallen to the lot of this woman during her entire life.

The other had known the need of rigid economy until in her old age, competence had come to her.

Yet she was not the richer of the two?

Every young girl who reads these lines in facing old age if the angel of death does not call her to finish her career in other realms sooner.

Which type of an old lady seems the most admirable?

If gentle speech and kindly views of life and people, if attractive manner and sympathetic and loving habits of thought are to obtain in old age, they must be practised in early life. We do not suddenly become transformed.

The critical fault-finding, corpulent severe old woman is a creature to be avoided by men, women and children.

The kindly, patient, companionable old lady is a joy and a comfort to all who know her.

Which type do you think you have begun to emulate?

It is only a little step from youth to maturity.—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

A Governor's Opinion on the Chicago Stock Show

Governor Cummins, upon being asked to express an opinion relative to the International Live Stock exposition of Chicago, which will be held from Nov. 28 to Dec. 10, made the following statement: "The International Live Stock exposition has been a potent factor in giving to the live stock industry the position it ought to hold throughout the west. It has brought into existence many other expositions of like character in the Mississippi valley, and has infused new life into the science of breeding. In my own state its effect upon the display of live stock at the state fair has been so noticeable that it is everywhere remarked.

"Chicago is peculiarly well situated for such an exposition. It is convenient to the north, south, east and west. In Chicago the champion herds may be assembled at the close of the annual show season to contest for final honors with minimum trouble and expense.

"I sincerely hope that the International Live Stock exposition may continue its helpful and brilliant career."

Dancing Proves Fatal Many men and women catch colds at dances which terminate in pneumonia and consumption. After exposure, if Foley's Honey and Tar is taken it will break up a cold and no serious results need be feared. Refuse any but the genuine in a yellow package. S. J. WILLIAMS. 33-44

Cromwell Two car loads of onions were shipped here last Monday bringing 25 cents per bushel.

There were two weekly shipments of stock last week by M. L. Hussey and Selig Bros. Hogs quoted at 5 cents.

The elevator is still kept in running order.

We have our two saloons running to fair houses. Gary Kresger is moving his furniture from Ligonier and setting up his Lanes and Penates in the house he formerly occupied opposite the livery barn.

El Pollock is moving his household goods to Kimmell where he has opened the saloon formerly occupied by Ed Keister. Geo. Keister is for the nonce tending bar for El.

The ladies of the Methodist church added $55 to the building fund of the new church on election day by supplying dinner, supper etc. to the election officers and others. Twenty-four chickens were slaughtered to make people alone.

Contractor Firestone is now engaged with an increased staff of mechanics raising the walls of the concrete building on the east side of the street adjoining the post office. The front will consist of a row of one glass window the largest in town, and one door on the south side looking west. The blocks are nearly all made and unless frost sets in very hard the building will be finished in a short time.

McPenna of Fort Wayne has put in all the stained glass now in the Lutheran church and L. Robbins is engaged on the stenciling of the walls and ceiling, and everything looks as if the place will be opened for services at an early date.

We are glad to state that Miss Hazel Moore is still convalescent.

Dallas Droud is contemplating a trip to Oklahoma the beginning of next week where he will spend the winter with his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Lesterman who migrated there some time ago.

Ike Dunlap has sold out his stock and implements previous to moving to South Bend where he expects to be called any day having obtained a position with the Tramway Car Co.

Two moons have passed without their being any disturbance in our midst but it seems it was not possible for a third to pass without having some kind of a rumour. By consulting the calendar I find that last Sunday was full moon and there is a common belief with some people that when that occur certain classes of mind become disturbed beyond their normal condition. Be that so or not the fact stands out that last Saturday we had another epidemic of brain storms right here in Cromwell. First two menmen Sam Ather and Herb Mayfield who have been working together amicably for the last two or three weeks continuously were suddenly attacked with the fever and rushed at each other tackled and pummeled away until the fever subsided. Now both men are going around evidently clothed in their sound mind but showing the marks of their late encounter. The second storm arose in Harry Hicks' billiard room, the storm striking one John Click who got mixed up with the proprietor. Results similar to those of storm one. The third is one that may be noticed every night and then tho' not of such a violent nature. The facts so far as can be learned are these. Two or three young men from Syracuse are in the habit of visiting here once in a while and last Saturday night before leaving got mixed up in some kind of horse play with some local nobodies in which no serious damage was done to any of the persons. The chief objection to it was the amount of offensive language used which grated harshly on the ears of those who were going home at that late hour. It shall take the scales off of these days to take note of this in more elaborate form as it is a perfect disgrace to our town sometimes to hear the profanity used on our streets.

How To Cure A Cold Be as careful as you can you will take a cold occasionally, and when you do, get a medicine of known reliability, one that has an established reputation and that is certain to effect a quick cure. Such a medicine is Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It has gained a world's wide reputation by its remarkable cures of this most common ailment, and can always be depended upon. It acts on nature's plan, relieves the lungs, aids expectoration, opens the secretions and aids nature in restoring the system to a healthy condition. During the many years in which it has been in general use we have yet to learn of a single case of a cold or an attack of the grip having resulted in pneumonia when this remedy was used, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous disease. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy contains no opium or other narcotic and may be given with confidence to a baby as to an adult. For sale by S. J. Williams.

Cured of Bright's Disease Mr. Robert G. Burke, Elmhurst, N. Y. writes: "Before I started to use Foley's Kidney Cure I had to get up from twelve to twenty times a night and I was all bloated with water, and my eyesight was so impaired I could scarcely see one of my family across the room. I had given up hope of living, when a friend recommended Foley's Kidney Cure. One 50 cent bottle worked wonders and before I had taken the third bottle the dropsy had gone, as well as all other symptoms of Bright's disease. S. J. WILLIAMS. 33-44
