Lecture Course

Have you seen the big bills for the L. C.? Are you aware that the first entertainment is Saturday evening of this week? Have you seen a better bargain this year than the six numbers on this course for the usual price?

Remember that the ticket and seat sale is at Parker's store tomorrow evening.

We are sorry to have the Concert on Saturday evening but could not avoid it, as the Quartet is at Angola Friday evening.

Do not fail to patronize this Course of lectures. Tickets, 75¢ $1.00 and $1.25. Children under 12 years of age half fare. Child you will hold on your lap free. Single admission 35¢.

With The Churches

CONGREGATIONAL
E. W. Gray, Pastor

We bespeak large things for the C. E. this season. They are branching out on a larger plan than ever. The Sunday evening services are largely in their charge with the pastor's council and guidance.

They have to give one or two concerts, and once each month we hope to have special talks or lecture by competent people on Vocational Choice. A lawyer, a doctor, a minister, a teacher, a farmer, a banker, a R. R. man, a mechanic, each talking about his own profession, giving the opportunity for the young people of this community to know more definitely what profession to choose.

Then they have charge of the Evening Choir under the leadership of Miss Celia Case. Last Sunday evening's Anthem ought to convince any one who heard it that they can do their part well, and add very much to the Winter's worship.

One or two plays will be given by this society for the benefit of the Community.

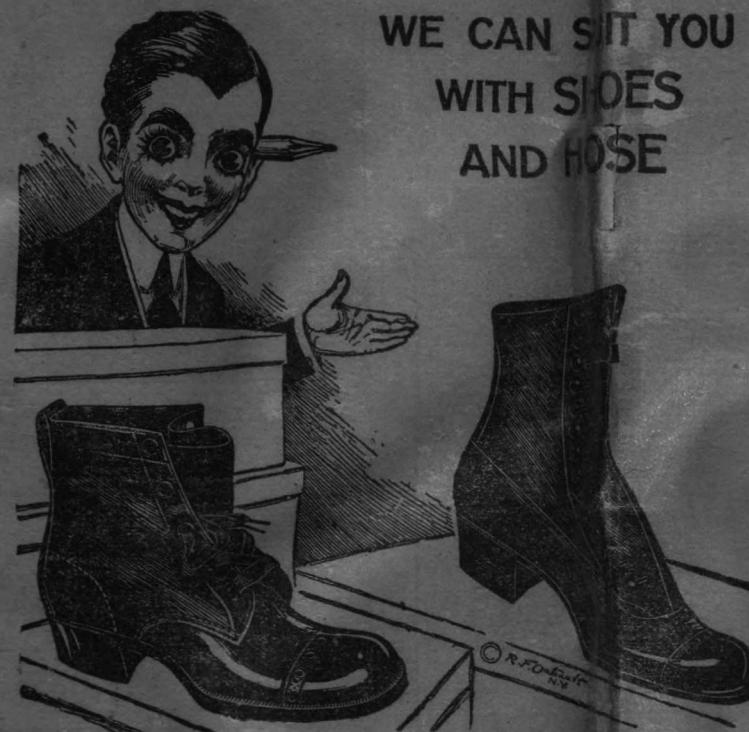

Boy's Club

The first meeting of the Boy's Club will be Friday evening. Let every member be there for the election of officers, and planning the Winter's work. Meeting begins at 7 o'clock.

What Tommy Atkins Eats

When General French's report of the first week's fighting of the British army in France was received last week it was noted that in mentioning the various branches of the service which had contributed to the success of the movements, he laid particular stress upon the wonderful work the commissary department had done. The early movements of the army were in the form of alternate stands and retreats, - a fight all day and a retreat at night. Yet the commissary was able to keep up with and serve Tommy Atkins and keep his belly full. And Tommy fought like a lion although he did not relish the continuous retrograde. Thus Lord Kitchener's promise at the beginning of hostilities has been carried out.

"Every man on the battle line will fight on a full stomach" he said and the publication of Tommy's menu shows plainly that England's war minister has made good his word. Every soldier is allowed a pound and a half of bacon and beef per day; a pound and a half of bread with cheese or jam; two ounces of tobacco, and much to the surprise of the more radical section of the people, a generous allowance of rum. Lord Kitchener, when commanding operations in South America learned that when hard fighting or marches have to be undertaken, or when troops have to remain for long hours without protection in wet weather, the rum stimulates the soldier to his best effort and minimizes the risk of chill.

There is no hope for the man
