

BUTCHER - KNIFE.

A PLAIN MAN'S PHILOSOPHY.

BY CHARLES MACKAY.

I've a guinea I can spend,
I've a wife, and I've a friend, [John Brown
And a troop of little children at my knee,
I've a cottage of my own
With the ivy overgrown [Brown;
And a garden with the view of the sea, John
I can sit at my door
By my shady sycamore [John Brown,
Large of heart, though of very small estate,
So come and drain a glass
In my arbor as they pass, [John Brown,
And I'll tell you what I love and what I hate,

I love the song of birds.
And the children's early words, [John Brown
And a loving woman's voice, low and sweet,
And I hate a false pretense,
And the want of common sense [John Brown
And arrogance, and fawning, and deceit,
I love the meadow flowers,
And the briar in the bowers, [John Brown
And I love an open face without guile,
And I hate a selfish knave,
And a proud, contented slave, [John Brown
And a lout who'd rather borrow than toil,

I love a simple song
That wakes emotions strong, [John Brown
The word of hope that raises he who faints,
And I hate the constant whine
Of the foolish who repine, [John Brown
And turn their good to evil by complaints;
But ever when I hate,
If I see my garden gate [John Brown,
And survey the world around me, and above,
The hated flies my mind,
And I sigh for human kind, [John Brown;
And excuse the faults of those I cannot love,
So, if you like my ways,
And the comfort of my days, [John Brown
And I will tell you how I live so unexposed,
I never scorn my health,
Nor sell my soul for wealth, [John Brown;
Nor destroy one dan the pleasure of the next,
I've parted with my pride,
And I take the sunny side, [John Brown,
For I've found it to be worse than folly to be sad
I keep a conscience clear.
I've a hundred pounds a year, [Brown.
And I manage to exist and to be glad, John

One of the leading Parisian journals condemns, in glowing terms, the bad taste of the Americans, in erecting a monument to the fame of Monsieur Danville, whose claims to celebrity arise from his murder of 'le docteur Parkinson' and a pompous London Daily informs its readers that the monument to Henry Clay has been erected at Lexington, the site of the first revolutionary struggle.

Dont the people over there understand American affairs?

Industry and economy will amass fortunes.

DANVILLE MARBLE WORKS.

Spiral Monuments,

A N D
ORNAMENTED GRAVE-STONES.
Finished up in neat and elegant style with either marble or lime-stone bases. To those who have a friend departed there is no purer tribute to their memory than a neat monument to mark their last resting place.

Lo, where the silent marble weeps;
A friend, a wife, a mother sleeps;
A heart sincere within this sacred cell,
Where all the peaceful virtues love to dwell.

We are also prepared to furnish Marble Table and Mantle Tops.
