

CORNER STONE.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 22, '78.

P. O. Address, College Corner, Ohio.

The "Coming" Woman.

Men often say, "When I marry, my wife must be this, that and the other," enumerating all physical, mental, and moral perfections. One cannot but smile to look at the men who say these things; smile to think of the equivalent they will bring for all the amiability, beauty, health, intellectual domesticity and faithfulness they so modestly require; smile to think of the perforated hearts, damaged morals, broken-down constitutions, and irritable temper, which a bright, pure, innocent girl is to receive with her wedding ring. If one-half the girls knew the privious life of the men they marry, the list of old maids would be wonderfully increased.

Doubted? Well, if there is room for a doubt now, thank God the "coming" woman's Alpha and Omega will not be matrimony. She will not of necessity sour into a pink-nosed old maid, or throw herself at any rickety old shell of humanity, whose clothes are as much out of repair as his morals. No, the future man has got to "step lively;" this wife is not to be had for the wistling. He will have a long canter around the pasture for her, and then she will leap the fence and leave him limping on the ground. Thicksoled boots and skating are coming in, and "nerves," novels and sentiment (by consequence) are going out. The coming woman, as I see her, is not to throw aside her needle; neither is she to set embroidering worsted dogs and cats, or singing doubtful love ditties, and rolling up her eyes to the "chaste moon."

Heaven forbid she should stamp around with a cigar in her mouth, elbowing her friends, and puffing smoke in their faces; or stand on the free-love platform, public or private—call it by what specious name you will—wooing men who, low as they may have sunk in their own self respect, would die before they would introduce her to the unassailed sister who shared their cradle.

Heaven forbid the coming woman should not have warm blood in her veins, quick to rush to her cheek, or tingle at her fingers' ends when her heart is astir. No, the coming woman shall be no cold, angular, flat-chested, narrow-shouldered, skimp, sharp-edged Betsy, but she shall be a bright eyed, full-chested, broad-shouldered, large-soled, intellectual being, able to walk, able to eat, able to fulfill her maternal destiny, and able—if it please God—to go to her grave happy, self-poised and serene, though unwedded; for this world, though it may do for men, is, after all, but a narrow place for a woman's heart to beat in. That many die and make no sign, is no proof that martyrdom died out with John Rogers. FANNY FERN.

In the office of a Wisconsin journal there is a compositor who sets type so rapidly that the friction of his movements fuses the leaden emblems in his stick, making them solid, like stereotype plate. The way to prevent this is to have his case submerged in water; and the rapidity of his motions keeps the water boiling and bubbling so that eggs have frequently boiled in the space box. Pipes lead from the bottom of the case to a boiler in the press-room, and the steam generated by the first compositor's movements runs the power press. In one day he sets so much that it took all hands, from editor to devil, two weeks to read the proof, and it was not a good day for setting type either.

A good printer will set six thousand ems a day, or about twelve thousand letters. The distance traveled by his hand will average one foot per letter, going to the boxes in which they are contained, and of course returning, making two feet every letter he sets. This would make a distance each day of twenty-four thousand feet, or more than four miles, and in the course of a year, leaving out Sundays, that member travels about fourteen hundred miles.

An Irishman was once asked if he had ever seen a red blackberry. "To be sure I have," said Pat; "all blackberries are red when they're green."

An Ohio man well posted in arithmetic says it takes thirteen hours' work and four quarts of soft soap to remove a coat of tar and feathers from the martyr's back.

A student at an Iowa college boarded himself on sixty five cents per week, and studied twenty hours per day. He is now an overseer of highway.

"Sixty dollars for a threshing machine?" exclaimed a boy when he saw a card on one for sale yesterday; "why, mother only pays two dollars a pair for her slippers."

Notice.

This is to give notice to the citizens of College Corner and country around that I have bought out the firm of Messrs. Baker & Bradford, and have opened up a Boot and Shoe shop in the basement of T.
