ATLANTA, Ga., November 21, 1893. Messrs. Editors: My son William was, in 1890, entirely cured of cancer of the mouth, which had caused him much pain and suffering, by S. S. S. By advice of physicians, who were unable to relieve him, an operation was performed, extending to the jawbone (which they scraped), but the cancer returned shortly after, and commenced growing rapidly. Finally, after trying many other remedies, I commenced to give him S. S. S., and with the second bottle he began to improve; after seven bottles had been taken, the cancer disappeared entirely, and though six years have elapsed, there has been no return.

My boy is now thirteen years old, in good health, and I have every reason to believe is permanently cured of the cancer and his cure is due entirely to S. S. S.

The Office-Seeker's Love.
When election day is coming
And the votes are in demand,
You will see the office-seeker
With an eager, outstretched hand;
He is in love with everybody,
And is willing to befriend
Anyone who has a ballot
And will help him gain his end.
He will take you in and treat you
To the best that's in the land;
There is nothing he'll deny you—
You have only to command.
He is studiously sincere
To your lightest word or look,
And you are the "prince of fellows,"
Be you workman, swell or crook.
But there comes a change surprising
In the man of many loves,
And you find that his affection
Naught but selfish motives proves.
When election-day is over,
And he feeds on public self,
He ignores you, or informs you—
You must hustle for yourself.
—Chicago Dispatch.

A Child's Reason.
"Come hither, my darling—leave your play.
The sound of your laughter makes me sad;
We cannot be always bright and gay,
We cannot have faces always glad.
"I know you are only five years old,
And so you could scarcely understand
Its meaning when yesterday you were told
That Baby had gone to the better land.
"I said: 'It was best!—Yes; so it was—
But it doesn't seem right to play straight on,
And not feel sorry and sad, because
The Baby we loved so much is gone.'"

The child with her innocent, honest eyes
Turned thoughtfully from her toys away,
And said, with a look of grave surprise:
"I'm sure I was sorry yesterday!"
