A REIGN OF TERROR.

Cook and His Outlaws Pillage Indian Territory Towns.

Post Offices and Towns at Watova and Tala Plundered—Citizens Menaced—Uncle Sam Asked to Aid in Suppressing the Gang.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 24.—Monday night's programme in the great carnival of crime which is now holding the boards in the Indian territory consisted of the wholesale robbery of several small towns in genuine desperado style by Bill Cook, supported by a strong and desperate company of eight or ten followers. Four men rode into the town of Watova early in the evening, marking their approach by a promiscuous discharge of firearms. The bandits terrorized the inhabitants, most of whom sought safety in their homes behind barricaded doors. The outlaws visited every store in the village and drove the merchants away. They took from the stores all the money they could find and everything else they wanted. The Watova post office was robbed of about $60 in cash and $55 in stamps.

From Watova the gang rode on to Tala, 10 miles away, where they repeated their depredations. They rode into town and proceeded to rob stores right and left. Every store in the place was visited and the proprietors compelled at the point of revolvers and Winchester to turn over their cash. The post office was robbed last, and while the scoundrels were plundering the east-bound passenger train pulled in, but did not stop long when the trainmen were told that the Cook gang was holding up the town and would probably attempt to rob the train. Talala is near Claremore. The bandits did not tarry long after the train pulled out. They galloped out of town, discharging their Winchester.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—Secretary Hoke Smith has requested the secretary of war to send troops to the Indian territory to suppress the lawless band, which have been operating there and in the adjacent country. Accompanying the request was the communication Secretary Smith received from the Indian territory, detailing the deplorable condition of affairs there.

Commissioner Browning, in a letter accompanying the secretary's, suggests that a troop of cavalry be sent into the Indian territory to assist Agent Wisdom in preserving the peace. It is expected that the troops would then be used to hunt down and drive out the marauders who are harassing the people.

These communications reached Acting Secretary Doe at the war department Tuesday afternoon and after reading them carefully he referred them to Gen. Schofield, commanding the army. Gen. Schofield looked into the matter and then returned the papers to the acting secretary with a suggestion that the request for the aid of troops be maturely considered with a view to ascertaining the legality of the proposed action. This indorsement from so high an authority upon the complex relations between the military and the civil branches of the government undoubtedly will cause the war department to move with great caution in acting on this request for troops, and in the end may result in a refusal.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 24.—Bankers and business-men living in the towns in the Indian territory, as well as those living outside the territory but doing business with territory firms, are greatly worked up over the condition of affairs which has made it necessary for the Pacific Express company to refuse money shipments either into or out of the territory. In the opinion of Superintendent Chase, of the Pacific Express company, there is but one way to stop this lawlessness, that is to make a state out of the Indian territory. A war of extermination such as Gov. Crittenden waged against the James gang in Missouri is what is needed. This can only properly be done by admitting the territory to statehood.

Just a One Child.

There's something comes just where I swallow, When the nice little children go by, I try to forget how my eyes get so wet, For it surely is foolish to cry. But all of them do seem so happy, It makes me feel dreadful to see How all of the others have sisters and brothers And ain't just a one child like me.

The other girls pushes wee babies, And brothers takes hold of their dress, I cannot see why, up there in the sky, God doesn't take notice, unless I have been, at sometime, much too naughty To trust with a soul from above; But O, I do pray, that He kindly may, Forgive, and send some one to love.

My mother laughs ever so wisely, She says that a one child will do, But papa feels bad whenever I'm sad, I'm quite sure he'd like to have two. I look at the others—so lonesome I am when I see all their glee, They may jump and sing, for the very worst thing Is to be just a one child like me.

—Elizabeth Cherry Haire, in Womankind.

The Arbitrator.

Two ladies reach a street car That has just one vacant seat: Each glances at it sidewise While they very warmly greet. "You take it, dear," says one; "No, you, I do not care to sit!" "There, now, it's yours!" the other adds; "I couldn't think of it!"

"You're tired, dear, I know you are, So do be seated, pray." The other says: "Oh, no, my love, It cannot be that way!" And thus they stand and bandy word For quite a block or more, But after while a truce is reached, The kindly tilt is o'er.

But just as they decide which one Shall occupy the space, An able-bodied man slips in And fills the empty place. —Nixon Waterman, in Chicago Journal

How Could I Know?

So many flowers bloomed in that noonday sun, How could I know That when I trod on one And crushed its golden glow, Now wandering in dim lowlands brown and sere, The tiniest faded blossom would seem dear? How could I know?

There were so many days the sunshine kissed, How could I know, When one I gayly missed And laughing let it go, That in long watches of some solemn night Dawn's quietest ray I should call heavenly bright? How could I know!

So many dear ones in those happy years, How could I know That when I mocked their tears And left them, loving so, In lonely, barren after-time I'd pray For weakest touch of hands I flung away? How could I know! —Fannie B. Dillingham, in Lippincott's.

The Hill of Gold.

The ragged rail fence just loaded along In a leisurely zigzag line Down the side of the hill, and wandered out To the murmuring slopes of pine.

And I had only to climb the fence, Or go through a crumbling gap, To let gold spill down out of my arms, And overflow from my lap.

And the fence never cared a single bit, For all it was there to guard, And I might have doubled my golden spoils Untrodden of watch or ward.

A careless old fence, and yet the hill Broke splendidly on the eyes— Gold clear out to the west, my dear, And gold clear up to the skies!

And you needn't say: "Oh, it's a fairy tale!" With that odd little scornful nod, For it happens to be our own East hill Grown over with golden rod. —Fanny K. Johnson, in Youth's Companion.
