A NARROW ESCAPE!

How it Happened.

The following remarkable event in a lady's life will interest the reader: "For a long time I had a terrible pain at my heart, which rendered almost incessantly. I had no appetite and could not sleep. I would be compelled to sit up in bed and belch gas from my stomach until I thought every minute would be my last. There was a feeling of oppression about my heart, and I was afraid to draw a full breath. I couldn't sweep a room without sitting down and resting; but, thank God, by the help of New Heart Cure all that passed and I felt like another woman. Before using the New Heart Cure I had taken different so-called remedies and been treated by doctors without any benefit until I was quite discouraged and despondent. My husband bought me a bottle of Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and am happy to say I never regretted it, as I now have a splendid appetite and sleep well. I weighed 125 pounds when I began taking the remedy, and now I weigh 130. Its effect in my case has been truly marvelous. It far surpasses any other medicine I have ever taken or any benefit I ever received from physicians." Mrs. Harry Starr, Pottsville, Pa., October 12, 1892. Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure is sold on a positive guarantee by all druggists, or by the Dr. Miles Medicine Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles $5, express prepaid. This great discovery by an eminent specialist in heart disease, contains neither opiates nor dangerous drugs.

"My wife was suffering from a fearful cough, which the best medical skill procurable was unable to relieve. We did not expect that she could long survive; but Mr. R. V. Royal, deputy surveyor, happened to be stopping with us over night, and having a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral with him, induced my wife to try this remedy. The result was so beneficial, that she kept on taking it, till she was cured. She is now enjoying excellent health, and weighs 160 pounds."—R. S. HUMPHRIES, Sassy, Ga.

An Interesting Batch of News From the Capitol.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28, 1894

Sensational statements concerning what congress would do with the currency bill when it resumed business have followed each other thick and fast this week and, although many of them were so wildly improbable that they are not worth mentioning, others had a foundation based upon truth. Among the last was the statement that the Democrats were so equally divided on the bill that the Republicans of the house would have the power of deciding whether the bill should be passed or defeated. This sound and quite improbable when first made, but when it was publicly reiterated by Judge Culbertson, of Texas, a member of the house committee on banking and currency, it took on a different aspect. Judge Culbertson said: "I believe that the Republicans have it in their power to pass or defeat the bill, and I have no idea that they will help to pass it." Another statement that is true is that the Democrats opposed to the bill are trying to get votes enough pledged to defeat it in the democratic caucus that is to be held next week. If they succeed there will probably be no caucus.

It becomes necessary in order to prevent the outright defeat of the currency bill, without a vote in the house, to abandon the proposed house democratic caucus it is believed to be the intention of the administration to attempt to duplicate the tactics adopted last year to pass the silver repeal bill through the senate. That is, to seek a combination between the republicans and the administration men. In order to test the sentiment of the republicans and the administration men. In order to test the sentiment of the republicans in the house some of them have been asked by friends of the administration whether they would support the currency bill if the state bank currency section, to which the republicans are unalterably opposed, were dropped.

Mr. Matthew Griffin, owner of an influential New York financial paper, is visiting Washington. He doesn't take a bright view of the business outlook for 1895. He said: "There is absolutely no ground for believing that there will be any great improvement in business for the next six months. A great many people pin their faith to a change in the currency laws. I don't believe the adoption of a new monetary system would mend matters a particle. Europe is poor; is in want of money and unloads her American securities upon us, so as to draw upon us continuously for gold. Our farmers are getting nothing for their products, and our railroads are not earning any money. What congress can do to relieve this state of things is past my comprehension. All we can do is to wait and hope." That congress could do much is certain, but that it will do nothing appears to be equally certain to the minds of many of its members. For instance, Representative Walker, of Mass., who claims to have been the first to suggest the idea of extending the currency of national banks, which is a part of the Carlisle currency bill, thinks things are practically in a dead lock. He says: "Financial legislation at this session of congress is impossible under present conditions, the whole question being so strangely muddled by the administration, which does not seem to have any conception of what legislation is necessary to compose the finances of the country and especially to relieve the treasury from the constant demands for gold."

Chairman Springer, who is in charge of the currency bill, has served notice upon Mr. Bland that when he attempts to offer his bill for the issue of coin and coin notes by the government as a substitute for the Carlisle currency bill he intends to raise a point of order against it, on the ground that it is not germane to the question that will be under consideration, and from another source Mr. Bland has learned that the program is all arranged to have that point of order sustained and his bill thrown out. There is likely to be a hard fight on this question, as every democratic member of the house who believes in the free coinage of silver will have to choose between supporting Mr. Bland's bill and reversing himself.

The story of a serious revolution in Hawaii, which was telegraphed from San Francisco his week, found few believers in Washington, and is thought to have no better foundation than the story of the arrest of a few royal conspirators, particulars of which came by a steamer that left everything quiet on the islands a week after those arrests.

It is said that several parties composed of members of the house who are opposed to the Nicaragua Canal bill are enjoying holiday pleasure trips at the expense of the canal lobby. Of course a little thing like that isn't likely to change any votes.
