e proportion of speculative busiuse of the useful people, and let speculators deal in wind if they can.

Whatever is proposed in the democratic-republican currency scheme, it may be confidently asserted nothing will be done toward the oration of silver—and it is equally ain that a concentrated effort to the greenbacks will be a part of scheme.

THERE are no $5,000 salaries paid

In the case of the present congress, it is not silence, but talk, that is

A PRESIDENT who makes a million dollars in one term at a salary of fifty thousand dollars a year is neither a servant of the common people nor an honest man.

CONGRESS is only playing with the people. They had no intention of passing the Carlisle currency scheme.
They have a worse one they will pass just as soon as the people get tired of their play and stop watching them.

THIS country will behold next summer the disgraceful spectacle of a special session of congress for the sole purpose of destroying the only patriotic money in the country—the money that saved the Union in a time of peril.

Don't be a "scab" at the ballot box.
Printers, farmers, blacksmiths, miners, railway men, moulders, carpenters, tailors, cigarmakers and all other trades should vote the union ticket, whose platform insures equal rights to all and special privileges to none.

Now what will the republican ma-

EMBASSADORS STRIKE

DIPLOMATS WHO CAN NOT LIVE
ON $17,500 A YEAR.

Bayard, Eastis, Runyon, MacVeagh and Breckenridge Threaten to Resign Unless Their Salaries Are Increased—What Will the Counts Do?

Mr. Bayard, ambassador to the court of St. James, is heading a strike of embassadors.

They receive salaries of $17,500 each per year—but they claim that it is impossible to maintain their dignity on this beggarly stipend and think that congress should increase their salaries to at least $50,000 each per year.

They threaten to resign and leave American dignity floundering in the mud.

They have been living riotously at their own expense, and now they want the government to pay the bills.

Mr. Bayard has organized the embassadors and held conferences, and presented their demands to congress.

The whole plea is from a social standpoint, an effort to sustain a royal dignity in the presence of royalty. We are inclined to refer to these princely strikers, in words such as plutocratic papers have used toward striking American workmen, just to see how such words sound when the other fellow's ox is gored.

Notes of the Embassadors' Strike.

The embassadors be d—d. The salaries paid embassadors are already too large.

There is too much dignity in this country rather than too little.

The embassadors might be more amenable to the hard times if they had to earn their salaries.

The time is approaching when the people will find it necessary to abolish the whole embassadorial farce.

If a rifle diet is good for strikers, why not give the striking embassadors a dose or two?

Call out the army, the embassadors are on strike.

Bread and water is good enough for embassadors.

Now that the embassadors are on a strike it is in order for the court to issue an injunction to stop the conspiracy to upset American dignity.

Lock up those embassadors that are not satisfied with their wages of $17,500 a year.

Wonder if they will save their money to buy guns.

We must get rid of salary gamblers.

There seems to be but one remedy a change of ownership of government, and the establishment of an American government at home, without asking favors from any foreign power on earth.

We need an American common people's government.

The dignity of labor at home is just as important as the prating of plutocracy in the court of St. James.

The old New England system of imprisonment for extravagance would be better than the present spoils system.

The best thing to do with an embassador who is stuck up, is to throw him in a sewer.

Embassadors who are striving for an increase of wages should be firmly hit in the neck with a wet elm club that other spoils hunters might take warning.

Probably the simplest method of dealing with professional office hunters would be to put a bull dog on guard at every door.

It would be a relief to the public mind if a few agitators for foreign dignity were taken out and carefully buried from human gaze forever.

A dollar a day is enough for an embassador.

Dictator Bayard should be imprisoned for conspiracy.

Start a soup house for the embassadors.

Put 'em on a rock pile with ball and chain.

Try them for interfering with foreign commerce.

They could get board in any of the capitals of Europe at $3 a week.

Let them drink cheaper whisky.

Let them wear overalls and save their Sunday clothes.

There is no sense in an embassador living in oriental magnificence, while 4,000,000 of the people he represents are homeless and hungry.

There are plenty of unemployed men ready to take their places. This is no time to strike.

There is an overproduction of embassadors.

Lack of confidence is what is the matter.

Put a tariff on foreign embassadors to protect American diplomats.

Let them go into the banking business on the Baltimore plan.

A PARTY that gained nearly half a million votes in an off year—according to the official returns of the recent election—will certainly not fail to elect the next President.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

From this it appears that the Globe concedes the election of a President to the Populists in 1896.

TRANSPORTATION QUESTION.

Necessary Reforms in the Present Railroad System.

Ottawa Journal: The abolition of all passes except to employees of the road.

The prohibition of all rebates.

A uniform passenger rate similar to present postage system, of two cents per mile for first class and one cent for second class passage. All long distance tickets to be abolished, and mileage books issued at same rates as for single passage.

Uniform freight rates regulated by law, sufficient to allow fair profit on actual value of the road.

All railways shall be operated on the market value of the road.

Government inspectors shall be appointed to regularly inspect every bridge and culvert, roadbed, ties, crossings, etc., with power to order removal and repairs of same. They shall also be inspectors of rolling stock, to see that all cars and engines are safe to life and limb of employee and passenger.

The use of all safety appliances in way of brakes, couplings, switches, etc., shall be made compulsory by law; and it shall be the duty of railway inspectors to enforce the use of such as may be recommended by a board of experts appointed by the government every other year.

Every road shall, out of its profits before declaring dividends, lay a double track.

That all employees disabled in service of any road by accident, or that have grown disabled by age in its service, shall be pensioned by it at not less than $12 per month.

That a violation of any of these requirements shall work a forfeiture of the charter to the government, which shall become the owner of the road by paying its appraised value.

Whenever it becomes necessary to appoint a receiver, it shall be the business of that receiver to take the road as a government agent, settle the claims of the debtors, and turn the road over to the government, which, by paying the stockholders the balance, if any, shall become the sole owner.

All gambling in railroad stocks, as in present stock boards, shall be made a criminal offense at once, thus helping to bring down the road to actual value.
H. H. Brown.

Casablanca Grover.

Grover is on the burning deck,
He stands there all alone;
Democracy's a total wreck—
Its glory all has flown.
The cuckoos, even, flew away,
The mugwumps hit the road,
And Clive and hanbug republicans
Are deeply un-er-shocked.

The flames of public wrath now glare
Round Stephen Grover's head,
They scorch his toes, singe his hair,
And paint the scene quite red.
Solid, indifferent, Grover stands,
Where goldbugs told him to;
He says, "the people may be d—d,
To Wal street I'll be true."

Still hotter will the people make
The deck where Grover stands,
He'll get it squarely in the neck
When Pops come in command.
They'll rout the plutocratic crew,
They will turn the ship to lee;
When the hanbug magazine explodes
Oh, where will Grover be!

"Heads I Win, Tails You Lose."

Chicago Sentinel: That is about the status of the currency question at the present time.

The people demand currency reform, the administration says "let's throw up for it;" the banker says, "I'll flip the copper (through congress, which I control)—heads I win, tails you lose. If we have any change in the currency it shall be a substitution of bank paper for greenbacks. If we have no change we will go on forcing bond issues until the basis for national banking is more firmly established than ever. Either way suits me."

The banker always manages to be suited. He was satisfied with Cleveland's election, but Harrison would have suited him just as well.

It don't matter to him whether the democrat or republican party is in power, just so he "flips the copper"—that is, controls the party which controls legislation.

It is about time Uncle Sam flips the copper and turns the tables on the banker, saying to him: "Heads, I win; tails, you lose."

Bank Failures Continue.

Bank failures and defalcations continue to be the order of the day. On last Monday at Dover, N. H., Isaac P. Abbott, cashier of the Dover National bank, was discovered to be a defaulter to the amount of $85,000. On Saturday the bank at St. Charles, Minn., was restrained from doing business on an action brought by the state through the bank examiner, M. D. Kenyon. The complaint asks for a dissolution of the corporation and the appointment of a receiver. The capital stock of the bank is $25,000, of which over $30,000 had been loaned to J. F. Kingsland, the vice-president and manager.

—Chicago Express.

The way to secure an increase of the circulating medium is to circulate more Populist papers. They will teach the people to vote for free coinage of silver and government issue of legal greenbacks.
