WHAT OTHERS SAY.

The Payne, Ohio, Press-Review hitherto a republican sheet has come boldly out for the Populist cause.—Ft. Wayne Dispatch.

Coxey, Populist candidate for governor of Ohio, notwithstanding the sneers of the gold bug press is an able speaker. Neither is he a pauper or a tramp as they represent. He owns 1,000 acres of the best land in Ohio, and a stone quarry that is in fortune in itself. But he stands boldly and nobly up for the rights of the poor and the down trodden.—Ft. Wayne Dispatch.

Look out for the rascals. The Cleveland - Morgan - Rothschild syndicate propose to issue gold bearing bonds in the place of the $346,000,000 of greenbacks now in circulation. Stick a pin here and see if the future movements of the gang do not verify this statement.—Ft. Madison, Ia., Chronicle.

The name of T. V. Powderly appears in the published list of delegates to the recent state convention of Republican League clubs of Pennsylvania. This is complete vindication of the Knights of Labor in deposing that arch humbug from the highest office in the gift of the order.—Ft. Madison, Ia., Chronicle.

Kentucky Populists.

While there are practically only two political parties in this state, the campaign has assumed the aspect of a three cornered fight. The democratic party has consolidated with the republican party on the money question and together they are waging a fierce warfare against the peoples party and honest government. The money seems to have hypnotized the leaders of the old parties, like the old Jew hypnotized Trilby, and they are powerless to do the bidding of any others than Cleveland and the Rothschilds, the prince fakirs of Europe and America.

P. W. Hardin, the nominee for governor on the democratic ticket, while passing as a staunch friend of bimetallism and an advocate of the free coinage of both gold and silver, is a chameleon and changes color to suit the place and location. He has always been an ardent advocate of free coinage and at the late democratic state convention, after a straight out and out gold bug platform was made by the committee and adopted with a whoop by the convention, Hardin was nominated and put astraddle of it, to ride the party, like a boy would a broomstick, to victory and the spoils of office.

In his introductory speech Col. Browder seemed to forget for the time being that he was the tool of the money power, and reflected his true feelings and honest sentiments in the following characteristic remarks: "While I differ politically with Hon. Thomas Petit, I have known him for years to be a strictly upright and straightforward gentleman of superior worth and ability and it now gives me great pleasure to introduce him as a candidate for governor of Kentucky of one of the grand political parties of the state."

It is said that Henry Watterson while talking to the G. A. R.'s here during encampment week, shed barrels of tears. Even his best friends could not the old world. He has filed his declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States, but his foreign system of landlordism remains unchanged. His income from land rentals now aggregates half a million. Several attempts have been made to compel him to pay an income tax, but without avail. One case against him went so far as the Supreme court, where he won it.

In 1876 a measure, aimed specially at him, was introduced into the legislature imposing a special tax on foreign and absentee holders of Illinois lands, but a cowardly legislature defeated it on the plea that it would drive foreign capital from the State.

Besides the land owned by Scully in Logan county, he owns large tracts in Sangamon, Grundy and Woodford counties. He owns more than a whole county in Kansas, large portions of counties in Nebraska, broad slices of several Missouri counties, and sections in other States.—Progressive Farmer.

At a recent meeting at Adairville this state, Mr. Petit was introduced to an immense audience by Col. Wilbur F. Browder, an out and out thoroughly pronounced gold bug and one of the foremost corporation attorneys in the southern part of the state.

In his introductory speech Col. Browder seemed to forget for the time being that he was the tool of the money power, and reflected his true feelings and honest sentiments in the following characteristic remarks: "While I differ politically with Hon. Thomas Petit, I have known him for years to be a strictly upright and straightforward gentleman of superior worth and ability and it now gives me great pleasure to introduce him as a candidate for governor of Kentucky of one of the grand political parties of the state."

It is said that Henry Watterson while talking to the G. A. R.'s here during encampment week, shed barrels of tears. Even his best friends could not understand what moved his lachrymal fountain to such a copious overflow. The mystery is solved in the above narration. Watterson had persuaded himself to believe that as a Kentucky autocrat he was invincible, and when he found that one of his gold bugs and corporation tools had wandered so far away from the touch of his plutocratic garments as to introduce a populist to an audience composed of thousands of the honest sons of toil, he began to realize while he was talking "Lincoln" to the old soldiers that his power of "fooling all the people (of Kentucky) all the time," had suddenly come to an end, and he stood before the great common people of his state and the nation the cringing hypocrite and tool of Wall street that he is.

The sudden letting down of one of his servants and lieutenants of the devil money power caused his soul to weep, and the citizens of Louisville were deluded into believing that it was a burst of patriotic feeling for the Union soldiers who had saved the nation thirty years ago. Not so.

Watterson wept because his prophetic vision told him that the same patriotic sentiment that stirred the old veterans to noble deeds of action away back in the 60's had taken possession of the people in this year of our Lord thirty years later, and in this state. Thomas S. Petit is their commander-in-chief around whose banner the farmers and laboring people of Kentucky are marshalling, and will be led to victory in November.

In his speeches Mr. Petit is opening the eyes of the tax-payers to the villainous frauds and high handed robberies perpetrated upon them and their children by the old party officials in the sale of common school books.

He showed them how they are being robbed right and left by being obliged to buy out of date, tattered, inferior-made text-books at prices ranging from 50 to 100 per cent more than good well-made books are sold for.

He demonstrated to the satisfaction of all his hearers that Kentucky is paying to that hydra-headed octopus, the American Book Concern, over $200,000 a year more than better books can be purchased for from honest competing publishers.

I am lead to believe that if Hon. Thomas Pettit continues spreading the new gospel of reform throughout the state as he has since the opening of the campaign, southwestern Kentucky will be carried by the populists almost solidly. There is no question but that many populists will be elected to the legislature, and will hold seats in both branches of this lawmaking body.

Here in Louisville the populists do not seem as yet to have made much headway. The Rothschilds have this city in their grasp. The merchants are almost to a man gold bugs, irrespective of politics. Democrats who have been denouncing the crime of '73 have been touched with a golden rod and now go about screeching for gold and sound money.

If you ask them why they are for gold and against silver, they cannot tell you why to save their necks.

They are as ignorant on the money question as Hottentots. They want to Europeanize America, and tie themselves up to the Shylocks and money brokers of Europe under the delusion that they are bettering their condition. They are like the dog in the manger, they will not eat nor allow any one else to eat—that is, in their bigotry they will not take advice or instruction on the money question from anybody but bankers, and won't read anything that will enlighten them.

The clerks and salesmen and working men are such subservient tools of their employers that they do not dare to hold opinions of their own, and if they did they would be discharged.

This servitude will be broken up by the reformers and a new light will dawn upon the people of this city and state.

The populists have established an organ here in Louisville, the Free Republic, with Hon. S. M. Payton as editor and publisher.

Mr. Payton was nominated at the recent populist convention for attorney general, and is making a brilliant campaign. He is an able attorney and one of the brainiest men in the state. No man in the state or nation is better equipped than he is to battle against plutocracy. He is a writer and handles the old parties without gloves. He shows up their villainy in such a way as to make them wince. Mr. Payton does every bit of the writing of his paper, as well as speaks almost every day and night. The Free Republic has a large circulation in every county in the state, and is causing the people to wonder why it is that they have been chained to the money power for so many years. It is a vote-getter and staunch reformer of the people and is driving consternation for Henry Watterson's soul. Mr. Payton is one of the finest orators in Kentucky and with his voice and pen is doing marvelous work for the people.

The Kentucky State Central Committee, of which Jas. A.

Parker is chairman, has every district in the State thoroughly organized and has placed good speakers in the field. Hon. James G. Field, of Virginia, who was the first vice-presidential candidate on the populist national ticket, is making speeches throughout the State, and is attracting large audiences. C. A. Power, of Terre Haute, Ind., the widely known author and writer, is helping in the fight as is also that young and brilliant orator, M. L. Daggy, of the Hoosier State. State Chairman Parker and State Secretary W. P. Marsh, of the state central committee, are both fine speakers and able campaign workers. Old Kentucky is being shaken from center to circumference, and the old parties will realize after the November election that they have had a foretaste of what they will get in '96.

Bank Directors Meeting.

The Directors of The Commercial State Bank of this town met at their rooms in the bank Tuesday morning for the purpose of reviewing the first six months business.

The books show that the deposits have steadily increased, being at this time in excess of $70,000.

A dividend of six per cent on the capital stock having been earned in the first six months, the directors, in pursuance of their policy of accumulating a surplus, ordered the whole of net earnings carried over, declared no cash dividend.

This bank opened for business on the 2nd day of April, 1895, in the room vacated by the Citizens State bank, which discontinued business.

The Directors are as follows.

Addison Parkinson, John M.

Wasson, Geo. K. Hollingsworth,

James T. Randle and Emmet L.
