Once upon a day in summer, came a boat, a white-winged "hummer." Was this saucy, brave new-comer? From old England's merry shore. Boldly came the proud pretender. Built to "wallop" the "Defender" And compel her to surrender. Her the cup forevermore. "We may best you," said the Yankees. "As we have done heretofore," Quoth Dunraven, "nevermore." But this lard from o'er the water. Somehow could not sail his yacht, or anyhow. "Defender" caught her. And outsailed her o'er and o'er. When his lordship growing spunkly Said unto his royal flunkies: "Let's not play here, let's not monkey With this buzz-saw any more. I'm done sailing, though I won't be Quoth Dunraven "nevermore."

The beautiful in nature is manifested now in the glorious leaves of Autumn, the varied hues being more brilliant in America than in any other country in the world.

Sheldon Smith of Morocco, one of the true blue in the reform movement, called at the Pilot office Saturday and made a financial expression of this compliment to the editor.

One encouraging feature of the land transactions in this county is that the buyers are generally men of more or less means who will run the farms themselves. Any community is more prosperous where tenant farming is not the rule.

A great deal of corn has been cut in this county and the fodder thus saved will be of the greatest value to help out the shortage in the hay crop. Where the corn is to remain in the field until winter it is usually put into large stooks, about twenty rows square.

The genial editor of the Lowell Tribune, Elmer E. Ragon, made the Pilot office a pleasant call last Wednesday, being one of the many visiting Odd Fellows at the dedication ceremonies. And by the way brother Ragon prints one of our brightest exchanges.

It is safe to say that the prices paid for Jasper county land this year is far below what it will be in the future. Its close proximity to Chicago and other good trade centers is bound to gradually force values up to the best prices prevailing in Illinois equally distant from market.

It is sometimes a little burdensome to have a large amount of even productive property, a notable example being the recent ordering of cement walks on Washington street by the city fathers, which caught A. Leopold for no inconsiderable amount as he has a very large frontage.

Compliments the Souvenir Edition.

The People's Pilot of Rensselaer got out a handsome souvenir edition for the new Presbyterian church at that place, this week. The editorial work was all done by members of the society, and is a very creditable piece of work editorially and typographically.—Wolcott Enterprise.

More, Not Less Hitching Racks.

There are whisperings of a move to take out the hitching racks about the court house. Now this may be all right for the purpose of beautifying the square, but as a business proposition it is bad. What is needed is more hitching posts, and until a suitable place is obtained elsewhere no curtailment of the present privileges should be thought of. Remove the hitching racks and you remove the teams from the streets to be sure, but you also remove them from the town and the immense business they represent goes with them to other towns.

Advanced $15 Per Acre in One Year.

The Wolcott Enterprise has the following item illustrating the steady advance in real estate values in this part of Indiana: W. H. Gerberich has refused an offer of $65 per acre for his farm north-east from town. That would have been a clear gain of $1,500 in a year, but Mr. Gerberich wisely considered that the farm suited him and he is contented, therefore will not sell his home.

The above is but the experience of all the recent purchasers in Jasper and adjoining counties, and the prospect is for a steady advance until the top mark of other localities, similarly located as to favorable markets is reached. No better lands can be found in any state than those of this locality. The present corn crop is sufficient evidence of the merits of the soil.

That's Jasper County's Side Partner.

Real estate men have over-run this vicinity again during the past week with a new set of men, and some transactions have occurred. White county soil is as much in demand as ever, prices ranging from $40 to $65 and $70 per acre.—Wolcott Enterprise.

Thrown From a Fractious Colt.

Tunday Eddie, son of Tom Dellingar, was thrown from a fractious colt, and one of his feet catching in the stirrup, he was dragged some distance. Had not the strap broken when it did, the boy would undoubtedly have been killed. He has nearly recovered from his injuries.—Wolcott Enterprise.

Notice To Tax Payers.

The second installment of taxes for the year 1894 are due and must be paid on or before the first Monday in November or the same will thereby become delinquent and a penalty of ten per cent must be added. Books will be returned to the auditor at 5 o'clock p. m., Monday, Nov. 5, 1895. Persons owing delinquent taxes should pay at once and save costs. Respectfully, J. C. GWIN, Treasurer.

Complimentary to Rensselaer.

The Wolcott Enterprise has the following to say of one of this city's pushing young business men, which is indeed justly merited: "A handsome granite monument arrived this week from the north shore of Aberdeenshire, Scotland, where it was quarried, and yesterday George Barcus, the Rensselaer tombstone man, came over to set it up in Meadow Lake cemetery over the grave of Richard Pugh. Mr. Barcus is putting up a large number of fine monuments in neighboring cemeteries, and this last contract will add greatly to his already established reputation for furnishing handsome tombstones."

Mysterious Death in White County.

White county may have a murder trial at the next term of circuit court. The mysterious and sudden death of Mrs. George Sloop, north of Burnettsville, Sept. 29th, has caused no little talk, and so this week the body was exhumed by order of the coroner and an investigation was made, resulting in a verdict of murder. The husband of the dead woman is strongly suspected of the crime, and he has been arrested to await further investigation. He claims, however, that his wife received her injuries from a fall, but circumstantial evidence at the inquest appears to find that foul play has been committed.—Wolcott Enterprise.

One Way to Boom Rensselaer.

Instead of in any way curtailing the present facilities for hitching teams in town it would be a better policy for the business men, all of whom depend largely upon the vehicle custom for successful trade, to encourage the establishment in connection with the several livery barns, or elsewhere, of a system of free sheds wherein horses may be stalled and fed. It would be a wonderful advertisement to the town, would cost but little in comparison with the increased trade that would come here, and would be, after once established, a source of revenue sufficient to maintain it. As many would buy hay and grain, and the attendants would pick up many a dime and quarter for courtesies offered and care given the animals.

The Way of Our Neighbors.

In Georgia and other southern states where hay is scarce, the most careful attention is given to saving corn fodder. While the leaves are yet bright and green they are stripped off by hand and tied in little bundles which are hung on the ears of corn. These bundles of nutritious leaves are gathered as soon as properly cured and protected from the weather. After the corn is fully matured the tops of the stalks are cut off and cared for similarly as are the leaves. The corn is not shucked on the stalks but gathered with all the attached hulls and leaves, the husking being done under cover where the shucks can be saved. This process, though laborious, gives the finest substitute for tame hay that can be had.

The Anna Keeler Dramatic Company opened the week with a really good performance. The play, "Jane" is a high class society comedy and was rendered in clean, dignified form. Miss Keeler and those of her company who were here last winter have added much to the polish of their appearance and present, with the new people, a dignified, prosperous presence. The costumes are equal to the requirements of metropolitan theaters. Miss Keeler's gowns being charming triumphs of fashion and fabric.
