Geo. Goff and wife were fishing at the popular Cedar Lake resort Tuesday and Wednesday. They were the guests of their cousin, Charles Sigler, who is running the most popular resort at the lake. They brought back a fine basket of fish as was ever seen in Rensselaer, consisting of black bass, silver bass, croppie and pickerel.

Wm. Washburn is in from his big farm in Jordan township and reports some marvelous effects of the present growing weather. Mr. W. is a truthful man and we can not doubt his belief in the unusual things he describes. He says that in planting corn the farmers out there have to keep their teams constantly on the move as the corn germinates and comes up so quickly that it is liable to clog the planter if even a brief stop is made.

Undertaker Wright says that up to Sunday last there had been a period of seven weeks without a call for an undertaker's services in the territory tributary to Rensselaer. This town is singularly free from epidemics of fever or other diseases. Sunday he furnished a casket for the eight-year-old daughter of William Cooper of Union township, who died of typhoid fever Sunday morning.

John Foresman of Foresman was in town Saturday looking after a Weary Willie who entered his home on Friday and very coolly carried off his full dress wedding suit. It is said the transformation of the tramp to a dude was as complete as it was sudden. Mr. Foresman's bride of three months was at home when the knight of the dusty road called, but fled to a neighbor's at sight of his devouring countenance. The despoiler of wedding habiliments has not been apprehended yet.

Judson H. Perkins has erected one of those handsome Aeromotors on the fine new livery barn by Mr. White now nearing completion. The windmill is anchored to timbers framed into the big structure, having a solid support direct to the ground. The conspicuous engine is forty feet above the roof and seventy-two feet from the ground. It is quite an advertisement for Mr. Perkins, who has put up many of these useful machines in Jasper county.

A. P. Wade, wife and little six-year-old son wheeled over from Morocco Sunday and visited Mrs. Wade's father, John Culp, in Barkley township. They returned Monday. Mr. Wade is the leading barber of Morocco and is doing a nice business. He was at one time a partner of E. M. Parsons in Rensselaer and has many friends here. Mr. Wade expresses his belief in the ultimate location of the county seat at Morocco, as the north end of Newton is rapidly settling up and that place will soon be the center of population.

The lecture at the Ellis opera house Tuesday evening by H. Vincent Moore, subject "Her Photograph," was poorly patronized. Those who stayed away because of the humorous nature of Mr. Moore's lecture certainly missed a good cure for the blues. Mr. Moore has a well modulated voice and a pleasant address, and the lecture he delivers is well calculated to catch that class of people who have a keen appreciation of the finer quality of American humor. His jokes, while not all new, have the merit of being dressed up in new garments. The lecture was given under the auspices of the Epworth League. It is quite possible that Mr. Moore would touch a more responsive chord in the hearts of his hearers if he would change his compilation of almanac witicism for more profound themes.

Snare White and Seven Dwarfs.

A real good scolding is exactly what the management deserves for not letting the public know more about the above juvenile cantata most excellently executed at the opera house last Friday night. The fact that for two months the work of careful preparation had been going on was practically unknown, whereas so great an undertaking should have been heralded from the beginning.

The announcement was made but a week before and people were unaware of the great labor involved; they did not know that upward of fifty bright faced, prettily dressed, sweet voiced little girls had been carefully trained for the grand choruses. Think of advertising a juvenile entertainment and leaving the juveniles out! The rendition of all the parts was good, and in justice to those who were not present it should be repeated.
