We are in receipt of the catalogue of Indiana University for the year 1895-6. It is a neat pamphlet of one hundred and forty pages. The total enrollment for the year is eight hundred and seventy-nine, an increase of one hundred and eight over last year.

Of the ninety-two counties of the state eighty-eight are represented.

That Indiana University is a growing institution is shown by the fact that in 1884-5 the total attendance was only one hundred and fifty-six. During the last four years the attendance has increased about one hundred annually.

This rapid increase in the number of students has made the appointment of new teachers necessary.

There are now sixty-five members of the faculty and there are two hundred and fifteen courses offered. These teachers are trained in thirty-eight of the best universities of this country and Europe. Three thousand volumes have been added to the Library during the last year.

Indiana University, as the head of the school system of the state, has more and more identified itself with the best interests of the people and with each year becomes more and more an instrument for good in the State.

Catalogues will be sent to any person on application to the Registrar of Indiana University, Bloomington, Indiana.
