"The Hub" Fall Opening.

Chicago's Great Clothing Store Makes a Handsome Display for the Annual Event.

A novel effect in exterior decoration is just now attracting a great deal of attention in Chicago. That well and favorably known clothing store, "The Hub," at State and Jackson streets, Chicago, is the originator of this unique display and the "ninth annual fall opening," the event for which it was prepared.

An entire immense business block totally covered with evergreen from the sidewalk line w y up to the roof, a old mountain of deep green foliage, studded with innumerable electric lights, producing an effect that carries one back to memories of World's Fair times, when this enterprising house surprised all America with an electrical display that challenged the admiration of people from all parts of the world.

The rapid growth and popularity of "The Hub" is a striking example of Chicago push and enterprise. Unknown and unimportant less than ten years ago, it now enjoys the distinction of being the largest clothing store in the country, if not in the world. The Hub of Chicago carries the largest assortment of ready-made clothing in this part of the country, and the very liberal patronage it enjoys seems to prove that the general public appreciates fully the low prices and up-right business methods of this great emporium.

Grant's Letter.

Reference to page 208, Congressional Record, Dec. 14, 1877, will show plainly enough that on Oct. 6, 1873, Grant was unaware of the fact that silver was no longer primary money. He did not know the act he had himself signed had demonetized silver. Under that date he wrote a letter to Mr. Cowdrey, in which he said:

"I wonder that silver is not already coming into the market to supply the deficiency in the circulating medium. Experience has proved that it takes about $40,000,000 of fractional currency to make the small change necessary for the transaction of the business of the country. Silver will gradually take the place of this currency, and, further, will become the standard of values, which will be hoarded in a small way. I estimate that this will consume from $300,000,000 to $350,000,000 in time of this species of our circulating medium. I confess a desire to see a limited hoarding of money. But I want to see a hoarding of it in something that is a standard of values the world over. Silver is this. Our mines are now producing almost unlimited amounts of silver, and it is becoming a question, 'What shall we do with it?' I here suggest a solution which will answer for some years to put it in circulation, keeping it there until it is fixed, and then we will find other markets."

A Stupendous Fact.

The assessed valuation recorded in the great national ledger standing to our credit is about $65,000,000,000. Our population is 62,500,000, and by some means, by some device, by some machinery, by some incantation, honest or otherwise, by some process that cannot be defined, less than a two-thousandth part of our population have obtained possession (and have kept out of the penitentiary in spite of the means they adopted to acquire it) of more than one-half of the entire accumulated wealth of the country.—John J. Ingalls in the United States Senate, Jan. 14, 1891.

An English View.

With the addition of silver to the volume of money, everything in America would take a new face; labor and industry would gain new life. The grip of the gold standard on the products of the world would be loosened, and prices would rise. Great Britain would lose her markets in South America, Asia and Europe, and American bottoms would not be long in capturing the carrying trade of the world.—London Financial News.

THE PEOPLE
SHALL GOVERN.They Are to Rule This Nation,
Not to Be Ruled.They Must Assert Their Sovereign Power.Government Based on the Rights of Manhood.

Not on Property and Its Privileges.

"We have nobody with us but the people," said Mr. Bryan the other day in closing a description of the exodus which has taken out of the Democratic party every supporter of trusts and monopolies, every dependent on usury, every speculator on the necessities of the people, every beneficiary of the corporations which wish to substitute their own cheap and intrinsically worthless paper for money of the mint, every upholder of the British gold standard and the British bureaucratic system of life tenure in office, every man who believes that corporation attorneys on the federal bench are greater than the people and entitled to rule the people without appeal even to the ballot box, and, finally, every officeholder who can be intimidated by a president and cabinet in sympathy with Wall street credit brokers, bond speculators and cornerers of gold.

It is certainly true, and it is the central fact of this campaign, that "we have nobody with us but the people!"

But it is not true for the first time. It was true in Andrew Jackson's day when Judge Story, a Federalist supporter of Adams, described the Jackson Democrats as the "most vulgar and gross people in the nation." And it was true still earlier, for in describing the conditions which ushered in the great Democratic victory of 1800, when the Federalist party was virtually wiped out, Thomas Jefferson wrote his friend and Virginia neighbor, Mazoni, then in France, a letter in which he gives a strikingly accurate outline, not only of that campaign, but of this.

"The aspect of our politics," Jefferson writes, "has wonderfully changed since you left us. In place of the noble love of liberty and republican government which carried us triumphantly through the war an Anglican party has sprung up, whose avowed purpose it is to draw us over to the substance, as they have already done to the forms, of the British government. While the main body of our citizens remain true to republican institutions * * * against us are the executive, the federal judiciary, two out of three branches of the legislature, all the officers of the government, all timid men who prefer the calm of despotism to the boisterous sea of liberty, all British merchants and Americans trading on British capital, all speculators and brokers, and with them the banks and dealers in the public funds (United States bonds), a contrivance invented for the purpose of corruption and for assimilating us to the rotten as well as to the sound parts of the British model."

So succinctly and comprehensively does this sum up existing conditions that it is hard to realize that a century has passed since it was written. The Democracy is fighting the campaign of 1800 over again. Now, as then, cries of treason are raised against it by the enemies of popular government. Its leaders are denounced as enemies of law and order, as Jacobins, as dangerous anarchists, just as Jefferson was then denounced by every one who believed, as the Federalists did then, as the plutocrats do now, that government should be based on property and its privileges, not on manhood and its rights.

But the Democracy did not turn then. It did not hesitate. Never so strong as when it has been deserted by all who fear the people, it pushed forward to victory under the leadership of the great man who first laid down "Trust the people!" as the fundamental principle of government.

It was the greatest discovery ever made in the politics of the world—this, that the people can be trusted. Never in modern times was it a factor in the practical politics of any country until the campaign of 1800, when the author of the Declaration of Independence took the field in support of the proposition that the people are the government—that they are not to be ruled in America, but are to rule it.

He had no one with him on that proposition but the people. But he was not frightened. He had behind him all the centuries of the dark ages of oppression and class government. He had before him all the ages of the glorious progress which is being worked now through confidence in the people and belief in their capacity for indefinite improvement through the indefinite extension of liberty. He dared to trust the people, and with him as their leader they won their first great victory under the declaration that all men are created free and with equal rights under the law.

Let no Democrat fear the result. In spite of the hundreds of millions of wrongfully held wealth being used against them, the people of the United States can assert their power to govern. And they will do it!—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Our Institutions Threatened.

Mr. Hanna would not only destroy our agricultural interests, upon which so much of the welfare of our cities and towns depends, but he would disfranchise the American voter.—Exchange.

BISMARCK'S LETTER.

Free Coinage in the United States Would Hasten International Agreement.

Governor Culberson of Texas on July 1 wrote to Prince Bismarck, asking his views on bimetalism and the likelihood of the United States government being able to adopt and maintain such a financial policy independent of any other nation. On account of inadequate postage, the letter was returned to the governor's office, thus causing several weeks' delay. Prince Bismarck answered as follows:

Friedrichstr., den 24. Aug. '96.
Geheimer Herr: Ihr gefälliges Schreiben vom 1. Juli d. Jrs. habe ich erhalten.

Ich habe stets Vorliebe für Doppelwährung gehabt, ohne, als ich im Amt war, den Sachverhältnissen gegenüber mich für unfehlbar zu halten. Ich glaube noch heute, daß es sich empfiehlt, das Einverständnis der am Weltverkehr vorzugsweise beteiligten Staaten in der Richtung der Doppelwährung zu erstreben.

Die Vereinigten Staaten sind wirtschaftlich freier in ihrer Bewegung wie jeder einzelne der europäischen Staaten, und wenn Nord-Amerika es mit seinen Interessen vereinbar finde, in der Richtung der Doppelwährung einen selbstständigen Schritt zu thun, so glaube ich, daß ein solcher auf die Herstellung internationaler Einigung und des Anschlusses der europäischen Staaten von förderlichem Einflusse sein würde.

Mit der Versicherung meiner aufrichtigen Hochachtung bin ich Ihr hochachtungsvoll ergebenster Diener
v. Bismarck.

TRANSLATION.

FRIEDRICHSTR., Aug. 24, '96.
DEAR SIR—I have received your favor of the 1st of July of this year.

I have always had a predilection for bimetalism without, when being in office, presuming to be infallible when confronted by experts. I still believe to-day that it is desirable to strive for the consent of all the principal commercial nations of the world in the direction of bimetalism.

The United States are economically freer in their movements than each and every one of the European countries, and if North America finds it compatible with its interests to set an independent pace, I believe that such a movement would be conducive influence to the establishment of an international agreement.

Assuring you of my most distinguished estimation, I am your excellency's most obedient servant,
v. BISMARCK.

It is the appreciation of gold's buying power which is causing this congestion of business and falling prices. Money is hoarded because it is growing in buying power. When money falls in buying power, property goes up. Then money comes out from its hiding places, and the wheels of the factories are set in motion.

Why the Plain People Will Vote For Bryan.

Because he is against the trusts and monopolies and they are against him.

Because all the enemies of the common people and of their interests are against him.

Because he is not mortgaged.

Because he is thoroughly honest.

Because the plutocrats hate him.

Because he is in favor of an income tax.

Because he is in favor of American independence in the matter of free coinage as well as in everything else.

Because he is opposed to government by injunction.

Because he will carry out the platform upon which he will be elected.

Because he believes in the widest possible diffusion of moderate welfare for the whole people.

Because he is opposed to laws to make the rich richer and the poor poorer.

Because his whole public and private career is without a stain or a flaw.

Because there has been too much legislation for the somebodies in the past and it is time to legislate a little for everybody.

Because those politicians like Tom Reed and Dave Hill, who never earned a dollar in their lives except by holding public office, are against him.

Because if he be not elected this time the people may not have another chance at self government, but will be living under the despotism of wealth.

If gold is not scarce, if there is enough gold with which to do the business of the world, why is it that every time the comparatively small sum of $500,000 or $1,000,000 of it comes into or goes out of the country the newspapers all make a big fuss about it?

A Pertinent Question.

In answer to the question whether any country ever coined silver free at a ratio so far from the market ratio it may be asked whether the market ratio was ever so far from the coinage ratio when the coinage of silver was free and unlimited.—Exchange.
