Seay a young lawyer who became prominent in his profession and was a member of an excellent family his brother being governor of Oklahoma. Storm in Kosciusko County.

A windstorm, nearly approaching a tornado in intensity, caused considerable damage at Yellow Creek lake and vicinity on Thursday evening. Barns, outbuildings and fences were twisted, torn and blown down during the few minutes the cyclone prevailed and the actual damage will amount to several thousand dollars. Robert and Art Haines' barn was totally destroyed, as were nearly all of their fences. Two horses were in the barn during the storm. One was found in the orchard, some distance away, while the other animal was standing on the roof which had fallen to the ground, the horse's halter-strap being yet attached to a piece of the fallen timbers of the structure. Neither animal was injured, which seems almost miraculous. The barn of Hiram Parker was unroofed, the building was moved three feet on its foundations and the west portion of the building was entirely blown in. All carriage and farming implements suffered destruction from falling timbers. Other small buildings on the place, including cattle-shed, windmill and corn crib were blown down. At John Parker's farm the house as well as the barn suffered and a large portion of the roof of the residence was blown off by the wind. No live stock was injured in any of the barns. The wind which was almost as strong as a cyclone, seemed to be confined to a strip about 300 yards in width and a quarter of a mile in length, and all buildings in that strip for some distance were wrecked or badly injured.—Warsaw Times.
