MORTUARY

David L. Gibson died at his home three miles southeast of Plymouth, Monday afternoon, April 4, 1904, aged 80 years and 10 days.

In his death Marshall county loses another of its pioneers, one of the three oldest settlers who were living at the beginning of this year.

He was born in Highland county, Ohio, and came to Marshall county, Indiana in October, 1834 with his parents, John and Mary Gibson, settling in Center township, which has been his home for almost seventy years.

This county was then an almost unbroken forest and most of its inhabitants were Indians; but John Gibson was a man of more than ordinary energy and with the help of his son, David L. who was then less than eleven years old, he soon cleared a considerable field and produced the first wheat ever raised in Marshall county. John Gibson was a man prominent in county affairs, developed a fine farm, established the first tannery in the county and helped to build the first Presbyterian church in Plymouth.

His eldest son, David L., who is the subject of this sketch, possessed the same energy and progressiveness and during all his life he was one of the county's most valued citizens.

He assisted his father on the farm until after he was twenty-one years old, and in 1850 he, with two other young men, made the overland journey to California with an ox team. He met with reasonable success and returning home he purchased the farm on which he died and which is now one of the best farms in Indiana.

In 1853 he married Miss Hannah D. Haines, daughter of Huron Haines of this county, who with three children survives him. They are Alice, wife of B. W. Parks of Bourbon, Lizzie, wife of W. S. Howard, of Colorado, and John H. who lives on the home farm. He also leaves an adopted daughter, Mrs. Windish, several grandchildren, one brother, James M. Gibson, and three sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth McCoy, of Terre Haute, Mrs. Mary Boggs of Argos and Mrs. Sarah Burden, of Bladen, Nebraska, besides many other relatives.

David L. Gibson, was essentially a self made man. He grew to manhood when there were scarcely any schools and his education, except of a practical kind, was limited, yet he was better informed than many younger men and was among the most successful farmers of the county.

He was of a restless adventurous disposition and liked to know something of the country in which he lived. He went to Pike's Peak in 1859, traveled extensively through the western and southern states during the past twenty years and owned land in several states and at one time owned an orange grove in Hernando county, Florida.

During the last five years he has been in declining health and his death came after a long illness in which he displayed the same tenacity and determination that had characterized his entire life.

Funeral services at the residence Wednesday at 2:00 p. m. conducted by Rev. George A. Plug, interment at Oak Hill.

Ora May Mast.

Ora May Mast died at her home, eight miles north-east of Plymouth, Saturday, April 2, aged 14 years 4 months and 14 days.

She was an intelligent amiable girl and leaves many relatives and friends who mourn her death.

She will be greatly missed by her school-mates for she was a good pupil and a girl of promising talents.

During the first days of her illness she had a great desire for health, but when she realized that death was inevitable she expressed a desire to pass from earth to a higher life, where in that better realm she would meet her father who died a few months ago.

Funeral services were conducted Monday morning by Rev. Mr. Rittenhouse of Bremen.

Physical Culture Recital.

The recital at Albert's Hall on Tuesday afternoon given by Miss Vera Humrichouser, completed her first term of physical culture lessons. It was greatly enjoyed by all present, judging from the many encores. Each exercise showed proficiency and special adaptability on the part of Miss Vera as a teacher of physical culture. The class was composed of children from four years old and upward. The wand drill and Faust Waltz given by Miss Humrichouser were very fine.
