Few people know why April 1 is called "All Fool's day." It is believed to have originated in France in 1564. In that year the reformed calendar was adopted, changing New Year's day from April 1 to Jan. 1. As it was customary to make gifts and visits on the New Year many people "got their dates mixed," and others made mock gifts to unsuspecting persons. The custom was kept up, but its origin was soon forgotten.

The M. Rumley plant, founded by Meinrad Rumley is Laporte's leading industry and an institution that will ever remain a monument to him who has just laid down life's burden.
