

THE PLYMOUTH TRIBUNE.

PLYMOUTH, IND.

HENDRICH & CO., - Publishers

1908 NOVEMBER 1908

Su	Mo	Tu	We	Th	Fr	Sa
1	2	3	4	5	6	7
8	9	10	11	12	13	14
15	16	17	18	19	20	21
22	23	24	25	26	27	28
29	30

1st. 8th. 15th. 22nd.

PAST AND PRESENT

AS IT COMES TO US FROM ALL CORNERS OF THE EARTH.

Telegraphic Information Gathered by the Few for the Enlightenment of the Many.

Six Men Meet Death in Mine.
Six men were instantly killed and another dangerously injured and three others had narrow escapes from injury or death in a mine cave accident at Ellsworth Mine No. 1, located in Washington County, Pennsylvania. The mine is owned by the Ellsworth Coal Company. The three miners who had been employed by the company several years, had just completed a survey of the mine preparatory to starting new entries, the six foreigners having assisted them. A heavy wooden beam was loaded into the cave and its ends projected beyond the sides, the men riding on the timber. All went well until within seventy-five feet of the top of the shaft the projecting beam struck one of the planks of the shaft's cribbing displaced by expansion due to the cold and most of the men were dumped out of the cage. The six fell to the bottom, a distance of 225 feet, and the heavy timber fell on top of them.

Big Fire at Indiana Reformatory.
Five buildings of the Indiana State Reformatory and nearly the entire plant of the Indiana Manufacturing Company at Jeffersonville, Ind., were destroyed by fire. The loss will total about $250,000. There were no fatalities, the 1,300 inmates of the Reformatory remaining locked in their cells, a portion of them sending cheer after cheer through the grating windows as they watched the work of the flames. When the fire was first discovered in the Reformatory the fire department of the institution was quickly put to work but in a short time the water plant failed and the Jeffersonville department was summoned. By the time it arrived, however, the flames had gained such headway that Louisville, Ky., was called upon for help, responding in a short time. After destroying five buildings the fire spread westward to the plant of the Indiana Manufacturing Company, destroying three buildings and entailing a loss of $100,000 to that concern.

Aged Woman Asks Divorce.
In the Wayne Circuit Court at Richmond, Ind., the case of Mary Elstro against Christopher Elstro for divorce and alimony was called for trial. The case is unusual, Mr. and Mrs. Elstro have married for sixty years and each is 68 years of age. The wife charges cruel treatment, saying that her husband called her names. The defendant entered a general denial. The children of the aged couple have divided, some of them standing with the mother, others with their father. The family is one of the best known in Richmond. Mrs. Elstro asks a reasonable sum for alimony.

Cleveland Blaze Causes $200,000 Fire.
The five-story building occupied by the F. M. Kirby Company, five and ten cent store and the M. Phillips Book Company, Indian suits and cloaks, on Euclid avenue, Cleveland, Ohio, was completely gutted by fire. The store occupied by J. Wageman & Sons, clothes, was flooded by water, and the costly decorations in the two-story bank building of the Guardian Trust Company, were damaged by smoke. Loss $200,000; insured. Two firemen were injured.

Burglars Shoot Village Marshal.
John Tripp, marshal of North Lewisburg, Ohio, surprised three burglars at work in the postoffice at that place. Single-handed he undertook their capture, but they escaped, leaving him shot in the knee. He was taken to a hospital at Marysville. A buggy belonging to Dick Cull, in which the burglars escaped, was found at Urbana. Blouhounds from Cardington have been brought to aid the searchers.

Night Riders Burn Tobacco.
A large barn containing 3,000 pounds of tobacco belonging to Harvey Montgomery was burned at Booneville, Ind. Night riders are supposed to have done the work.

$150,000 Fire at Cairo.
Fire destroyed Winter Brothers' ice factory and the packing-house of Nelson Morris & Co. at Cairo, Ill. The wholesale produce house of Cotten Brothers was partly burned. Loss $150,000.

Morris Haas Commits Suicide.
Morris Haas, who shot Francis J. Heney at San Francisco, Cal., committed suicide at the County Jail by shooting himself through the head.

Rabies Cures from Terre Haute.
Twenty-five patients from Terre Haute, Ind., are under treatment for rabies at the Pasteur Institute in Chicago, more cases are expected and business in the Indiana municipality is demoralized.

Sears Girl's Face with Acid.
Gertrude Huff, 20 years old, is the victim of a bold attack by an unidentified man who dashed a vial of carboic acid in her face as she was walking out of the yard at her home in Cincinnati, Ohio. She probably will be disfigured for life. Neither Miss Huff nor her parents could assign a motive for the act.

Has New Divorce Law.
The new divorce law, increasing the period of residence from six months to one year, was carried on Nov. 3 in South Dakota by a vote of two to one, according to unofficial figures.

Benton Harbor Stores Burn.
Fire Friday threatened the destruction of the business district of Benton Harbor, Mich., and did damage estimated at about $125,000. The blaze started in the feed store of H. P. Boehm and spread to the four-story Morrill & Horley building. Both were destroyed, together with the Haas livery barn and a residence.

NEW MURDER FARM FOUND.

Rich Farmer Under Arrest as Slayer and Horse Thief.

In the belief that many bodies will be found buried on a farm near Marengo, Ill., and that a series of murders similar to those in the Ganey case may be brought to light, the sheriff of McHenry county and a force of workmen have begun to dig up the chicken lot of John Bedford, a wealthy farmer, in the search for further evidence against the man, who is under arrest. The body of Oscar Hogan, a wealthy farmer whose estate adjoined that of Bedford and who disappeared two weeks ago, has already been dug up in the poultry yard. John Belmont, another farmer, and an unidentified farm hand employed on the Bedford place have disappeared. It is the theory of the police that they were murdered and buried on the farm. William Evans, who lives at Marengo, spent the night at the farm a short time before the disappearance of Hogan, who has been arrested in Nebraska. He charges that while at the farm he was assaulted and robbed and had to fight for his life. Bedford has been arrested at the home of relatives in Benton, Neb. Requisition papers for his return to Illinois for trial for murder have been obtained and a deputy sheriff is in the western city to bring him back.

SIX SMUGGLED CHINESE DEAD.

Oriental Perish as Motor Boat from Canada Hits Buffalo Steamer.

A motor boat containing ten Chinamen and three white men was wrecked on the breakwater of the foot of Michigan street, Buffalo. Six of the Chinamen were drowned or crushed to death against the rock-ribbed sea wall. The four survivors were rescued by the crew of a police boat. The three white men escaped and the federal authorities and local detective force are searching the city endeavoring to round up men suspected of being engaged in the smuggling of Chinamen into this country from Canada. How the white men got to shore was the subject of a searching investigation. The statement of an elevator watchman that a second motor boat left the shore side of the breakwater just before dawn is a clue upon which the authorities are now working and which will lead to arrests. One of the Chinamen left Toronto a week ago and had been lodged in a barn on the Canadian side of the lake opposite Buffalo awaiting a favorable opportunity to make a landing in the United States.

CLEVELAND LINE OF RECEIVERS.

Warren McKinnell and Frank A. Scott to Run City's Traction System.

Julius Taylor of the Federal Court in Cleveland appointed Warren McKinnell and Frank A. Scott as joint receivers for the Municipal Traction Company and the Cleveland Railway Company. Each of the receivers will furnish a bond of $100,000. Warren McKinnell is one of the best known electric railway builders and operators in the country. He is president of the Havana Electric Railway, which controls all the street railways in Havana, Cuba, and is identified with several traction companies in Ohio and other States. Frank A. Scott is secretary and treasurer of the Superior Savings and Trust Company, and is identified with several traction companies in Ohio and other States. He will operate it under the direct supervision of the court. The rate of fare, it is said, will be as low as can be made consistent with good service.

PAY FIREBUG FOR IMMUNITY.

Residents of Graniteville, N. Y., Unusual Victims, Says Police.

When Joseph of Graniteville, N. Y., was arraigned on a charge of arson a confession signed by Thompson was submitted to the court. The police learned that Thompson was in receipt of weekly payments from the trustees of Graniteville of sums ranging from $1 to $2, which they paid him to leave their places alone. He had unlimited credit in the stores and saloons, it was said, because of the payments he received. Residents of Graniteville were in court and requested the magistrate not to permit Thompson to go free, even on bail. He was sent to jail.

CALLS SESSION OF UNEMPLOYED

James Eads How Announces National Convention in St. Louis.

James Eads How, heir of Millionaire James B. Eads, who built the Eads bridge at St. Louis, called a meeting of the unemployed of the Mississippi, on his return the other night from the East, where he has been in the interest of the unemployed, announced that a national convention of the unemployed would be held in St. Louis in January to take steps to provide ways and means to meet the conditions of what promises to be a severe winter. He was given a great reception at Welfare Hall.

Held for Murder of Carmack.

John D. Sharpe ex-sheriff of Davidson county was arrested and lodged in jail at Nashville, Tenn., charged with murder and aiding and abetting in the murder of ex-Senator E. W. Carmack. It is alleged that he was seen with the two Coopers shortly before the killing and was also at the scene of the tragedy immediately after Carmack fell to the ground.

630 Die in German Mine.

Three hundred and eighty miners were cut off at the Radboud mine, three miles from Hamm, Westphalia, Germany, by explosion and fire, and 330 of them perished. Three hundred and two bodies are still in the mine and it is believed they will be consumed in the fire.

Fire Sweeps Tannery.

The tannery of the American Hide and Leather Company was badly damaged by fire in Ballston, N. Y., causing a loss estimated at $75,000. The tannery has a capacity of 2,000 sides of leather a day and employs 500 men.

Dakota Ends Quick Divorces.

The new divorce law, increasing the period of residence from six months to one year, was carried on Nov. 3 in South Dakota by a vote of two to one, according to unofficial figures.

Secretary Metcalf to Quit.

Secretary of the Navy Metcalf has resigned to take effect Dec. 1, and will be succeeded by Truman H. Newberry of Michigan, his assistant, says a well-known Washington correspondent.

Gomez and Zayas Elected.

Gomez and Zayas, Liberal candidates, won the Cuban elections by a plurality of at least 25,000 and street rioting following the victory was suppressed by police.

Thieves Get $18,000.

Within a few feet of clerks and guards three hundred and fifty men in the South Bend (Ind.) post office and took $18,000 in stamps.

Big Fire in Benton Harbor.

Fire Friday threatened the destruction of the business district of Benton Harbor, Mich., and did damage estimated at about $125,000. The blaze started in the feed store of H. P. Boehm and spread to the four-story Morrill & Horley building. Both were destroyed, together with the Haas livery barn and a residence.

Speaks for Revenue Tariff.

Andrew Carnegie in a magazine article will advocate a tariff for revenue only instead of one for protection, but will urge a retention of high duties on luxuries for the rich.

MICHIGAN TO FIGHT FOR LAND.

Dispute with Wisconsin Over Boundary to Go to Federal Court.

Has the State of Wisconsin been in undisputed possession for fifty years of a portion of the territory belonging to the State of Michigan? And if so, what is the State of Michigan going to do about it? There are possibilities of a striking aspect in the situation presented by this inquiry. If Michigan has been deprived of a portion of valuable territory through the error of a surveyor, and the error can be established, will the courts disturb the boundary line between two sovereign States? This is the question that is likely to reach the Supreme Court of the United States, and it constitutes a hard nut for that tribunal to crack. Two years ago, largely through the interest taken in the matter by the late Peter White of Marquette, the attention of the Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government surveyor in 1841 did not follow the instructions of Congress, and that if he had done so a strip of territory now assumed to be a part of Wisconsin would constitute a portion of the upper peninsula of Michigan. This strip comprised about seventy square miles, and if the Michigan survey had been followed, it would have been a part of Michigan. The Michigan Legislature was called to the fact that the government survey