TEACHERS WILL MEET THIS WEEK

A NATIONAL COMMERCIAL GATHERING WILL BE ADDED.

State Teachers' Questions of Importance to Be Discussed—Notable Educators on the Program.

Indications are that the holiday atmosphere around Indianapolis this week is going to be decidedly murky with intellectuality. Just as soon as their Christmas dinners settle the commercial college teachers from all parts of the country will begin moving on Indianapolis, and, beginning Monday, Indiana school teachers of all stripes are heading for that city.

The commercial teachers open their thirteenth annual national convention in Shortridge high school beginning Monday morning. On Tuesday the Indiana teachers open their fifty-fifth state convention, and will meet in Tomlinson hall, Caleb Mills hall, St. Paul's church, the Claypool hotel assembly room and in different rooms at the state house.

The commercial teachers in their national convention expect 1,500 to 2,000 of their kind. Some are counting on as many as 4,000, but it may fall short of that.

A Spencer and Pitman.

All of the latest frills and furbelows in shaping up the knots on the head and building up the cavities will receive attention. Many noted educators in both the common school and the commercial college world will be there this week. One of them will be Robert C. Spencer, who is a son of the writer that most Americans try to imitate—his father being the originator of the Spencerian system of penmanship.

Federation of Many Associations.

This national convention is peculiar. It is rather a federation of many associations and each of these will also hold its national convention in Indianapolis. In the list are National Business Teachers' National Private Commercial School Managers, National Commercial High School Teachers, National Penmanship Teachers, and National Shortland Teachers' Associations.

The program of the meetings would fill two columns of space; a list of the speakers over half a column. This is the thirteenth annual coming together of these forces that in America take pupils when they leave the ordinary schools and equip them for commercial and business careers. The range of subjects to be considered extends from shorthand, typewriting, bookkeeping and "system" to common sense letter writing. "This last subject will be dealt with on Wednesday morning at the joint meeting of the high school and short-hand associations.

Merger of Indiana Bodies.

The Indiana school teachers will have a matter of considerable interest before them. The southern Indiana teachers at their last meeting held in Indianapolis last spring proposed that the southern and northern Indiana teachers' association be merged and their present separate spring meetings be discontinued. The proposal brought forward was that all energy be concentrated in one big state teachers' meeting every year. This matter will be discussed on Wednesday. The proposal involves to a greater or less extent the present state meetings. Some leaders in both the northern and southern Indiana association sessions favored merging the two associations and doing away with the annual holiday state meeting.

Many teachers, including leaders, expressed the belief that there are too many teachers' meetings in Indiana every year. Many objected to being drawn from their homes in Indianapolis every year when they should be at home enjoying—like the children—a happy holiday week with their friends. There was a complaint also at the expense of multiple meetings.

The principal session of the state this week will be in Tomlinson and Caleb Mills halls. Among the chief speakers on the program of the Indiana teachers are Booker T. Washington, Bishop William F. McDowell, of Chicago; President Elmer F. Bryan, of Franklin college; President W. L. Bryan, of the State university; L. D. Harvey, of Menominee, Wis., who is the president-elect of the National Educational association; Robert J. Aley, newly elected superintendent of public instruction of Indiana; Fasset A. Cotton, the retiring superintendent, and President J. L. Lardner, of the Indiana State Normal school.

At the opening session in Caleb Mills hall on Tuesday George W. Benton, the president-elect of the association, will take office and deliver his inaugural address. Dr. Elmer F. Bryan and L. D. Harvey will also address that session, the latter on "Education of Girls for the Home." The program for the week is very long and is complicated by many "divisions" holding separate meetings.

The Indiana county superintendents will also hold their annual meeting in connection with the teachers' association convention and other minor associations may also hold meetings or reunions.

It is announced in advance of the Indiana teachers' state meeting this year that there will be little agitation for legislation at this session. The teachers were very well satisfied with their treatment by the legislature two years ago. Still, there may be some matters to take before the legislature.

Jury is Dismissed.

After returning the verdict in the Protsman case the jury was dismissed for the November term of court Wednesday evening. The court is now completing the docket, and court adjourns on January 2nd.

ESCAPES FROM WARSAW JAIL

Milo Kline Charged With Intent to Murder Makes His Get-Away.

Dashing past Officer C. W. Douglass, Milo Kline, convicted of assaulting Frank Henwood with intent to kill, escaped from the Kosciuszko county jail and is now a fugitive from justice. Officer Douglass was about to place a tramp in the bastille, when Kline, who had been watching his chance, dashed past the policeman, who, turning quickly, fired a shot in the hope of frightening the young man and causing him to stop. Kline, however, kept on going. Kline, who is a North Webster product, was recently sentenced to serve thirty days in jail. At the same time he was fined $100. There was also considerable costs in the case, which would have compelled the young man to remain in jail much of the winter unless relatives or friends came to his assistance. Several months ago Kline was charged with having a net in his possession contrary to law, and fish wardens and Officer Douglass went to North Webster for the purpose of arresting him. Kline took to his heels and Officer Douglass fired his gun. Kline and his relatives claim that the bullet hit Milo as he was scaling a barbed-wire fence. He kept in hiding for several weeks and then of his own accord, came into court, entered a plea of guilty and paid a fine.

INSTITUTION FOR INCORRIGIBLES

ANNUAL REPORT OF INDIANA REFORMATORY AT JEFFERSONVILLE IS ISSUED.

More Accommodation Must Be Had for Increasing Criminal Population—Has 1250 Inmates.

The annual report of the Indiana Reformatory, for the year ending September 30, 1908 has been issued from the bindery of the institution. It consists of sixty-nine pages, printed in excellent style on good book paper in a neat stiff brown paper cover with black and red lettering and sent out in a neat envelope similar to the cover. The illustrations include in addition to those of the various departments representations of the articles manufactured in the Reformatory. The frontispiece is perhaps unique and consists of an excellent half-tone engraving of a painting done by an inmate in the painting trade school and called "The Wanderer's Return."

The recommendations to the Legislature covered by the report have been announced before, but two special features have hardly been referred to. These are the surplus population and the trade school policy. The report of the board of trustees is evidently written in view of impending political changes and it is a plea for the continuance of the present policy of conducting the institution. After referring in detail to the excellent condition of the institution and the amount it has earned for the State the question of the trade schools is taken up in detail. Reference is made to the "financial success" of these departments and the position is taken that from year to year the trade schools should be increased and the "departments," such as the foundry, chain works and shirt factory dropped as soon as practicable. This is apparently an attempt to take the wind out of the sails of those who are expected to be preparing to attack the system of employing the inmates in competition with "free labor."

Sold to Other Institutions.

The product of the trade schools is almost exclusively sold to other institutions, although the law permits the sale of any surplus in the open market. None of the schools is large enough to furnish much surplus except the three "departments" named, which employ six hundred men between them. Pleading further for present methods the management says:

"We believe that if we get the same encouragement from the Legislature in the future that we have had in the past, it will be only a few years before the Indiana Reformatory will be able to take care of all inmates in its school of letters and in its trade schools which manufacture supplies for State institutions and political divisions of the State. At this time it would be suicidal and almost criminal, in our judgment, to interfere with the system and work now being carried on at the institution, and the management should have time to develop fully the methods already established for caring for the unfortunate fellows who come to the institution, by means of trades, schools and moral instruction."

Institution for Incorrigibles.

The other feature is the new institution recommended by W. H. Whitaker, general superintendent, for incorrigibles and defectives. This is an enlargement and enforcement of an idea he put forward last year. The trustees in their report refer vaguely to this matter, but they set forth plainly enough that more accommodation must in some way be provided for the increasing criminal population. The institution now contains 1,250 inmates, says the report, but the actual number has already reached 1280 or more. The trustees believe that before the Legislature of 1911 meets this population will have grown at the present rate to 1,350 or 1,400. The institution contains 908 cells to accommodate the present population and possible increases, the dining-room will only accommodate 1,000, and the chapel will not seat any more than that number.

Mr. Whitaker, in his report to the trustees, included in this report, says that he has carefully considered this matter and has come to the conclusion that a new institution should be provided for the class of criminals that are "abnormal and can no more be benefited or made to become good citizens than the dwarfed and crooked bush be trained and cultivated into a sturdy tree." He says from 40 to 50 per cent of those sent to the Reformatory belong to this degenerate class, and for them he wants the special institution, because not only are they not benefited at the Reformatory but also they take the time and money that should be spent on those who will show results. His proposal is for an institution provided with not less than 2,000 acres of ground, to be run as a farm.

Every Confirmed Criminal.

To this place he would have the courts commit "every confirmed criminal, insane criminal, epileptic and degenerate" to be kept for the full length of their maximum term. He says such an institution could be made self-sustaining by raising wheat, vegetables and other crops for other State institutions, keeping the labor of the inmates from competition with free labor.

The statistical tables show 426 received during the year, besides 40 recaptured and twenty-seven others returned. The population on September 30, was 1,250, an increase of seventy-five in the year. Ten died, of whom two committed suicide by hanging and four succumbed to tuberculosis. The typhoid fever epidemic is not covered by this report. The State agent's figures show that the total number paroled to date is 2,700, of whom 370 have been marked delinquent, and the same number have been returned for violation of parole, while 320 are now reporting. In the corresponding month a year ago the latter figure was 188, the management being now more careful about granting the final discharge. The statistical tables show the institution has received 17,605 since it was established in 1822. During the same period 729 have died in prison and 383 have escaped.

HANDICAPPED.

This is the Case With Many Plymouth People.

Too many Plymouth citizens are handicapped with a bad back. The unceasing pain causes constant misery, making work a burden and stooping or lifting an impossibility. The back aches at night, preventing refreshing rest and in the morning is stiff and lame. Plasters and liniments may give relief but cannot reach the cause. To eliminate the pains and aches you must cure the kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently. Can you doubt Plymouth evidence?

Theodore McLaughlin, proprietor of grocery on South street, Plymouth, Ind., says: "The backaches and pains over the kidney regions that I endured for many months, totally unfitted me for any exertion. I tried several remedies, but none went to the cause of the difficulty until I procured Doan's Drug store and took them according to directions. They not only removed my aches and pains but made my general health better than it had been for years. You may put me down as an enthusiastic admirer of Doan's Kidney Pills."

Nearly everybody knows DeWitt's. The old fashioned way of doing a weak stomach, or stimulating the heart or kidneys is all wrong. Dr. Shoop first pointed out this error. This is why his prescription—Dr. Shoop's Restorative—is directed entirely to the cause of these ailments—the weak inside or controlling nerves. It isn't so difficult, says Dr. Shoop, to strengthen a weak stomach, heart, or kidneys, if one goes at it correctly. Each inside organ has its controlling or inside nerve. When these nerves fail, then those organs must surely fail. These vital truths are leading druggists everywhere to dis- "sense" and recommend Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Test it a few days and you will stop the cough by allaying inflammation of the throat and lungs, and it drives the cold from the system by gently moving the bowels. Children like it for its tastes nearly as good as maple sugar. Sold by all
