

THE PLYMOUTH DEMOCRAT.

J. G. OSBORNE, Editor.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA.

THURSDAY, NOV. 9, 1865.

Organization of the next Congress.

The radicals have finally under the lead of Phillips, Tilton, Sumner and others of like views, perfected their scheme for the disfranchisement of the South in the next session of Congress. McPherson, the clerk of the last House is to make out a list of members from the non-seceding States only, whose names will be called prior to the organization of the House, leaving the southern members out until after the committees are all appointed, and then only admitting such of them as will agree to assist in consummating the schemes of the radicals. This, it will be seen, is in direct conflict with President Johnson's plan of reconstruction, and a palpable view of the law applicable to the case. It is, in a word, as much a revolutionary and disorganizing spirit, as that evinced by the rebels in their attempt to break up the government by force of arms, and should call down upon the perpetrators the condemnation of all true men. We suppose all the members will be required to take the test oath before they will be admitted to seats. For this there may have been some excuse during the existence of the rebellion, but certainly there is now no good reason why it should be required. There is probably very few men in the Southern States who could conscientiously swear that they had never voluntarily borne arms, or aided, in the prosecution of the rebellion, yet there are thousands of men there who did bear arms, and render aid, who know that the supremacy of the Federal government is established, accept the existing state of things and in good faith are desirous of doing all they can publicly and privately to restore the prosperity of the country. Such men we think are preferable, as members of Congress, to those radicals who have always regarded the "old flag" as a "haunting lie," and "hates polluted rag," and who have ever spoken of the constitution of our common country as a "covenant with death, and a league with hell." Now that the war is over and the questions incident thereto permanently settled, we think it would be wisdom on the part of our rulers and of the people generally to ignore as much as possible all the animosities and bitterness of the past, and seek to cultivate those feelings of amity and friendly social and commercial intercourse without which the union of states is nothing less than a name. It is iron-bound despotism, hateful alike to a free man North and South. North and South alike have suffered much from the insane ravings of extreme men in their respective sections, and we have no desire to see the same causes produce again the same or similar effects. With the return of peace let good will and confidence again exist as in the early days of the republic.

Good News.

The Franklin Democrat of a late date, under the above attractive caption thus discourses relative to the recent severe affliction of His Excellency O. P. M.:

Our readers are aware that for some time past Gov. Morton has been suffering, as rumor has it, from a serious injury received in one of his usual night rides in a cab. It is said that he, in company with a weak brother of the Christian Commission, visited, on an errand of charity, one of those frail places that are always to be found in flourishing cities; and that the cabman at a late hour called for his Excellency, who in a hurry to leave, slipped from the high door step and either fractured, dislocated, or in some other way, seriously injured his running gear, so as to make it prudent for him to "hold up." That there is now no danger of "the disease going up into the body," or of any long continued paralysis depriving the State of his dear services.

We are rejoiced to hear that he is not only convalescent but doing well, and would suggest that he appoint a day of thanksgiving and Praise to the Almighty for saving the people their great Governor, and that all loyal and well disposed persons lay aside their every-day jobs and manifest their gratitude by singing songs of praise, to doing charitable deeds, and eating good dinners.

JEFF. DAVIS.—The telegraph keeps at work sending its stories about the trial of Davis. We publish them, and our readers can take them for what they are worth. The Cabinet are said to be mostly in favor of his trial by a military commission, while the President favors his trial by a civil tribunal. It is also said that Chief Justice Chase is not desirous of presiding at his trial. Some definite action will probably be arrived at in his case in a few days.

The result of the elections on Tuesday is summed up by the Chicago Times of yesterday as follows:

The lightness of the vote cast throughout the country, at the elections yesterday, sufficiently indicates the little interest felt by the people in the result. Issues were slight and not sharply defined, and the republicans, having possession of the offices and wielding the influence thereby conferred, were enabled to bring out a strong array than their opponents. A half vote determines nothing, and from the election yesterday we have no precedent to infer results in future. The spathy of the democracy was very distinctly marked, as may be observed in the city of New York, where they should have had nearly 40,000 majority and came off with little more than 20,000, or in Milwaukee, which gave Hobart but half the poll she should have done. It is plain that the democrats are not voting this year, except, perhaps, in Detroit, where an average vote was polled, and the democratic majority is about the same as at former elections. In other places, where a full vote was brought out, the democrats have gained, or at least held their own; while the party discipline of the republicans in localities where the vote was lightest, gave them the advantage.

In Minnesota and Wisconsin, the question of amending the constitution as to permit negro suffrage was presented directly to the people, and, although the republican state tickets were successful, the case seems to have been decided adversely to the amendment by decided majorities.

WIRZ.—A telegram from Washington says the President has not taken up the papers on the Wirz case. Judge Holt has prepared a very elaborate brief of all the evidence. It is not at all likely that the President will change the verdict of the commission. They found him guilty of all the charges and specifications, and he will probably be hung within a week.

Since writing the above the telegraph announces the President's approval in the findings and sentence of the Court, and that Wirz will be executed on Friday next. He received the news of his approaching death with composure.

THE FENIAN MOVEMENT is creating quite an excitement just now both in Europe and America. It is said that the British government has in its employ in this country a large number of spies upon the movements of the Fenians who report the result of their observations as often as requisite. We are not among those who have any great amount of faith in the ultimate success of the Fenians, nevertheless, we can but sympathize with their reasonable efforts to free their own "green isle" from the domination of England, and give again to the Irish people that liberty which intelligent Irishmen have always so highly prized and dearly loved. Not so, our liberty loving neighbor, hear him:—

"So far as we are individually concerned we have no preference between the Fenians and the British, but on some accounts would not care to see a rebellion in Ireland, even if it did not succeed, as it certainly would not, in order that we might have an opportunity to retaliate upon Johnny for the course he pursued toward the United States during the recent troubles. We think it would improve his morals to have his logic turned upon him."

He has no preference between the down-trodden and outcast sons of a dearly loved and cherished land and their oppressors, but "on some accounts would not care to see a rebellion in Ireland even if it did not succeed." Of course he wouldn't care, not he. Why? Simply because he does not care how many Irishmen may be caused to bite the dust. He never liked the Irish, and he would not even bid them a God speed in anything they might undertake. He would not care whether they succeeded in freeing Ireland or not if they make the attempt now, because just at this time he wishes an opportunity to retaliate on England, but at any other time he doubtless would prefer the failure of the movement.

Internal Revenue tax.

We see it stated in late telegraph dispatches from Washington that Secretary McCullough will recommend the substitution of a tax on sales for the present cumbersome machinery known as income tax. In some respects this would be an improvement on the present system, but in others it would be very far from equitable. The great difficulty under the present system, is the constant temptation to the commission of fraud, and the expense of assessment and collection of the revenue. These are however no greater than are to be expected in every system of special taxation. The true plan, it seems to us, would be first, a universal poll tax; second, an ad valorem tax on the property of the country, not excepting bonds and treasury notes. By this plan all would share alike in proportion to their wealth in sustaining the burdens of the government, and there would be no cause for dissatisfaction between different localities, or even different classes in the same locality.

Gen. Wade Hampton, the last Southerner to yield to the fortunes of war, and who declined to be a candidate, has been overwhelmingly elected Governor of South Carolina. He has not yet been "pardoned" by the President.

We stated a couple of weeks ago that Hon. James L. Orr had been elected Governor of that State. Subsequent intelligence, however, confirms the truth of the above statement.

The editor of the Warsaw Indianian says a man called on him a few days since and related his adventures through the county of Marshall where he had been looking for a location to settle. He stopped at several farm houses, and saw no books or newspapers in all his travels save the Bible and the Plymouth Democrat. He tells the editor they are all democrats in Marshall county, this he knows from having seen the documents. The editor thinks this don't speak well for the intelligence of the county. We differ with you, Mr. Editor, it is the best evidence in the world of intelligence. There are no better democratic documents now in circulation than the old Bible and the Plymouth Democrat. Of course they are very distasteful to a Kosciuszko abolitionist; all democratic documents are. The Bible, the Constitution of the United States, and the Declaration of Independence have been thrust aside in Kosciuszko county, and the man who openly manifests his veneration for them is called a traitor, and is liable to fall a victim to a drunken mob. For the benefit of Warsaw abolitionists who may have any notions of settling in Marshall county, we would say they had better stay away until they can bear the sight of an old Bible or a democratic newspaper without calling everybody who reads them, copperheads. And Mr. Indianian, when your citizens cease to rob blind soldiers, and stop mobbing women in your streets, and when your town acquires any reputation at all, either at home or abroad, for intelligence or respectability, it will be sufficient time for you to fire your battery in this direction.

The recent republican convention of Cook County, Illinois, having some twenty nominations to make, very generously (!) conferred one of them on a returned soldier. There were seven or eight soldiers who were candidates for nomination, but all except one were unceremoniously elbowed out of the way and slaughtered without mercy.

The soldiers, not relishing such shabby treatment from those who had always heretofore made such great protestations of friendship and sympathy, called another convention and put a ticket of their own in the field. For doing this the Tribune and Journal have been busily engaged for some time past in threatening the soldiers with everlasting political contempt if they do not at once cut loose from their "sympathizers," the democrats, and fall into line under the command of the drill-masters of the republican party at Chicago.

One among twenty nominations! Oh, how the republicans of Chicago do love the returned soldiers!

A correspondent of the New York Daily Times, now traveling in Alabama, writes to that paper:—"The fact is, Mr. Lincoln or the Congress of the United States, or both together, in abolishing slavery, only half performed their work. They left undone the most critical part of the job. As the case now stands, the blacks of Alabama are a thousand times worse off than when held in bondage and involuntary servitude. Many of these ignorant beings are deluded with the idea that next Christmas is to be their millennium, and that among other things they are all to have a farm, with plenty to eat and drink, and nothing to do. From Huntsville to Mobile, and from West Point to Demopolis, the most heart-rending pictures appeal the passer-by. They live in caves, huts, old boilers, and under bridges, and keep body and soul together with what they can beg and steal—these freedmen. As to the kind of Freedmen's Bureau, I have no plan to propose. I leave that to wiser and more sagacious men."

The above is from an abolition journal. Before the war the same paper was forever harping on the horrors of slavery, and the sufferings of the "oppressed" slaves. Now slavery is abolished, and we find this same abolition paper relating the horrible condition of the negro after receiving his freedom. So it has ever been with the abolitionists—slavery was a bad thing, but freedom is a thousand times worse.

Going to Italy.

The Terre Haute Express says: "A sea voyage has been prescribed for Governor Morton by his physicians. Consequently, as soon as he gets the Legislature fairly at work, he will leave the State Department in Governor Baker's hands and go to Italy, where he will spend the winter with his family."

We trust that the soft skies and genial atmosphere of Italy, together with the sea voyage, will recuperate the exhausted energies and declining health of His Excellency, and restore him to the physical energy for which he was distinguished before he undertook the arduous duties of the gubernatorial office. The voluntary expatriation of His Excellency, although for but a short period, will also test the experiment whether the people of Indiana will be able to take care of themselves during his absence and continue the Governmental machinery in motion. Governor Baker will have very grave responsibilities to assume, but if His Excellency will leave him a suit of his old clothes, with the generous aid of the people, we have an abiding faith that he will be able to discharge the Executive duties, if no other.

The following shows the political complexion of the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Ohio, at the coming session:

Senate—Republicans 25, Democrats 12.

House—Republicans 68, Democrats 37.

Republican majority 21. This gives the opposition a majority on joint ballot of 44.

Garrett Davis and the Military.

The Kentucky papers report the facts in the case of the suit brought by the Hon. Garrett Davis in the Bourbon County Court against Generals Palmer and Brisbane, the Kentucky Central Railroad and others, for enticing and carrying away a number of his slaves. The thanks of the community are due Mr. Davis for this action. Of course we well understand that it is not the mere value of his slaves which he is anxious to recover. His object is to vindicate a principle and teach the petty military tyrants of the day that the law is about to resume its supremacy. Much parade has been made of an order of General Thomas directing the arrest of any citizen who shall bring an action against an officer or soldier of the United States for acts done by the orders of his superiors. We have heretofore stated that this order was done away with by the revocation of martial law. It was issued for the purpose of deterring persons who had suffered injury at the hands of the military from any attempt at redress; and it is still used for that purpose. But Mr. Davis has taken the most effectual means to satisfy the people that the order is ineffectual and vain, by doing in his person the very thing which it forbids him to do. If the defendants in his case have any justification for their conduct they must plead it as any citizen would be required to do. If they have not such justification they must suffer the penalty which the law inflicts for their crimes. The idea that a citizen is absolutely without redress, because his oppressor happens to wear the uniform of the United States, is monstrous indeed. It is the settled law of England that the direct command of the King will not excuse the commission of an illegal act. In a case reported in 3d Cranch, the Supreme Court of the United States decided that the order of President Washington was no defense to an officer who had obeyed it by seizing a vessel not legally liable to seizure. And in the case of Harmony vs. Mitchell, (7 Howard), the same court expressly decided that the order of his military superior is no defense to the officer who obeys it, if the act done be not lawful. The officer who issues, and he who obeys, an illegal order, are each liable in damages to any party injured by its execution. General Thomas may, for a little while longer, screen his subordinates from deserved punishment, but by doing so he makes himself an accomplice in their guilt, and sooner or later must partake their responsibility.

Jeff Thompson tells the editor of the Louisville Journal that the only persons in the South who wish to do any more fighting, are those that didn't do any when they had a chance.

This is "just the case" with the Abolitionists of the North. During the progress of the war, they were too cowardly to fight, and served their country by stagnating. They let others do the fighting, whilst they remained at home to undo what was being done by those in arms for the Union; and they now declare that the rebels cannot be trusted! These are the cowardly Union strikers who wish to inaugurate a war of races, by attempting to give the negro the right of the elective franchise. —LaPorte Democrat.

An impeachment of Seward.

Montgomery Blair, who was in the Cabinet with Seward at the time of the attack upon Fort Sumter, thus arraigns him:

"I impeach William H. Seward of participation in the conspiracy to throw our people into the unfortunate condition in which they are now placed. The surrender of Fort Sumter was the turning point in the rebellion. The holding it was peace—the abandonment of it was war. The suppression of the rebellion there was its suppression everywhere. Mr. Seward agreed to surrender the fort. He persuaded Mr. Lincoln to protect the paralysis for six or seven weeks after he came into power. When Mr. Lincoln overruled Seward and determined to reinforce Fort Sumter, Mr. Seward sent word to the rebels of the fact by Mr. Harvey, now our Minister to Portugal. He procured the vessels—which were ordered to reinforce the fort—to be sent to another place, without the President's knowledge. The fort was surrendered, and the rebellion broke out all over the South."

A VALUABLE MARSH.—The LaPorte

Union contains the following:

Mr. Joshua Watson, of Seipie township, in this county, raised this year 1,100 bushels of cranberries on a marsh containing ten acres, on his farm. He sold them at this city, Michigan City, and Westville, at from $1. to $4.50 per bu. We venture to say it is the most profitable ten acres of ground, or marsh, in this county, and perhaps in the State. The crop was no expense except the cost of gathering and marketing, which we are told did not exceed one hundred dollars. The net profit to the fortunate owner is about $1,500.

LOUISIANA.—In Louisiana the Freedmen's Bureau has been abolished by Gen. Fullerton, and all the cases relating to the freedmen are turned over to the State courts, the officers of the Bureau, however, being instructed to see that the negroes receive justice. The Confederate ex-Governor Allen, now a voluntary exile in Mexico, who was nominated by his admirers for re-election as Governor of Louisiana, has, it is said, declined the honor, expressing his intention of remaining in the dominion of Maximilian.

New Orleans papers report difficulties with the negroes in the parishes of Caddo and Bossier, and an outbreak is feared unless a military force is ordered to the scene. The Governor is said to be rapidly organizing his forces to meet this and every other similar emergency.

The latest advices from South America state that the town of Uruguay had been captured by the allies, after a siege of six weeks. 5,000 Paraguays were captured and immediately drafted into the allied army.

The restoration of property stolen by Gen. Butler in New Orleans has been made general by order of President Johnson.
