

One Hundred Years to Come.

Who'll press for gold this crowded street
A hundred years to come?
Who'll treat you down with willing feet
A hundred years to come?
Pale trembling age and fiery youth,
And childhood with his brow of truth,
The rich and poor on land and sea; Where will the mighty millions be
A hundred years to come?

We all within our graves shall sleep
A hundred years to come;
No living soul for us will weep
A hundred years to come;
But other men our land will till,
And others then our streets will fill,
And other words will sing as gay,
And bright the sunshine as to-day,
A hundred years to come.

An American and Unprincipled Husband is a Fix.

The Richmond, Wayne County, Telegraph gives the following account of a "respectable married man" of that city with a fascinating wife.

A certain married man of this city, a few months ago, became decidedly enamored of a dashing young widow, and set industriously about the task of accomplishing her ruin. Various proposals for an elopement, &c., were made and rejected, but finally he received the widow's promise that if he would call at her residence at precisely 12 o'clock on a certain evening, he would be admitted. He, of course, was there on time. Ringing the bell softly, the door opened and a voice from within whispered: "Is that you, darling?" Our adventurer gave the password and was admitted. He was requested to take off his boots, to avoid making a noise; he complied. In perfect darkness he was conducted into an apartment, where he proceeded to disrobe himself, and just as he imagined himself on the brink of glory, the gas suddenly burst out, at full gate, revealing to his astonished vision about twenty-five of his most intimate friends, male and female, most prominent among the latter class, he had the pleasure of recognizing the face of his own wife. An explosion of laughter ensued, the venturesome young man made a hasty grab for his coat, boots and hat, and struck a bee line for the street and his own home. The Telegraph declares that he has since enjoyed can be easily imagined than described.

The Irrepressible Misger.

Since the passage of the Civil Rights bill, the African population are beginning to assume entirely too much importance. In almost every exchange we notice accounts of the manner in which negroes are conducting themselves under their newly acquired civil rights. The other day, in New York, a party of five of them walked into a first class restaurant, on Broadway, complacently set themselves down to a table with white people, and gave orders in an imperious tone, appealing to the provisions of the Civil Rights bill to protect them against objection. In a town in this State, the other day a negro walked into a barber's shop, and demanded of a white barber that he should be shaved, and upon refusal the barber drew a knife, threatening the life of the barber. This is only the beginning. The negro will attempt to crowd himself into the churches, theatres, and all other places of resort, and if his conduct is deemed to be in violation of his protesting against the Civil Rights bill. This game won't win. Congress may make the African an equal of the white man before the law, but it cannot do so socially, and the darkies must learn that they will not be tolerated except in the condition which nature designed them. When he commences putting on airs, he will have to be reconstructed, and that, too, in a most summary manner. Public opinion will regulate the darky, and keep him in his proper station to which he belongs.—Ind. Herald.

The Aristocracy of Crime.

A Boston correspondent says shoddy and petroleum now hide their heads before the surpassing luxuriance of the beggar's growth of wealth obtained from burglary—burglary condensed, glorified in, unpunished, and lavishly rewarded. We have in our vicinity two members of this class of wealthy men. One is Charles Adams, the robber of the Concord Bank, who, after all the hubbub made over his detention, has settled down for life with an independent fortune, on the snug farm which he made the base of his operations against the bank safe, and drives a splendid span, with the bride whom his successful speculation has enabled him to marry within a month past, envied by all her poor and honest neighbors. The other is Horace Anis, the hero of the still bolder operation, which carried a million and a half of money in broad day light from the counting room of a purblind New York broker, and who has been here within the week, because in the security from arrest which was one of the terms of his bargain, and boasting to the admiring detectives and sporting men who are his familiars, of the cool hundred thousand which he carries in his pocket as the result of his speculation.

What did Mary say?

During the trial of one Cogel for kidnapping, which took place lately in Hillsboro, N. C., an incident occurred which created considerable fun at the expense of wigs and counsel. A Miss Sloan was testifying, and was requested to state all that she knew about a certain transaction.—Witness—"I was in a sitting-room, when Mary came from the kitchen hurriedly, and Cogel held her. He caught hold of her at the sitting room door, and said, 'Mary you have been here long enough, come and go home now.' 'What did Mary say?' 'Attorney for State—'Stop there; I object to the question.' Here a discussion of nearly two hours took place, in which four lawyers participated; after which the Judges held a long, serious and exciting discussion on the subject, and finally, in a very formal and pompous manner, stated that it was the opinion of the Court that the question should be answered. The court room was crowded almost to suffocation, and the most intense interest was manifested at this stage of the proceedings. The question was repeated, 'What did Mary say?' and the witness answered, 'She didn't say a word!'"—North Carolina Paper.

His Solid and Fluid Extracts embody the full strength of the ingredients of which they are composed. They are left to the inspection of all. A ready and conclusive test of their properties will be a comparison of those set forth in the United States Dispensary. These remedies are prepared by H. T. Helmholdt, a druggist of sixteen years' experience in this city, and we believe them to be reliable, in fact we have never known an article lacking merit to meet with permanent success, and Mr. Helmholdt's success is certainly prima facie evidence, His Drug and Chemical Warehouse, in the City of New York, is not excelled, if equaled, by any in the country, and we would advise our readers, when visiting that city, to give him a call, and judge for themselves.

is the only Physician as a Specialist, now in Chicago that can be entirely relied upon. Go to him, and not suffer that horrible disease to remain in your system, disfiguring your face and body, and forever destroying your happiness and future prospects of life. He has made private examinations and reserves his study for the past twenty years, and is therefore the person whom all afflicted should consult. No one ever heard of a patient of his not being cured since he has been in the city. His reputation has vouches in all the city papers, his patients and the medical profession, both here and abroad, as being the most skilled specialist here, and a thorough master of all sexual diseases. If all others fail, don't despair, give him a call. It is only a fair non-occurrence with him to cure such cases—this is his motto, and he is a gentleman, and the most complete in the city.

Young men take particular notice—Dr. Bigelow devotes much of his time to the treatment of diseases caused by a secret habit, which ruins both body and mind, uniting the unfortunate individual for either business or society. The real effect of these early habits, or the excess of riper years is to weaken and obliterate the constitution, destroy the physical and mental powers, diminish and enfeeble the vital energies of manhood; the pleasures of life are marred, the object of marriage frustrated, and the future of the individual is a scene of increasing misery and regret. Such persons, especially those who contemplate marriage should lose no time in making immediate application, as Dr. B. by his new treatment is enabled to insure a speedy and permanent cure.
