Our winter term of school closed on Saturday with sumptuous dinner prepared by the ladies of this place: a surprise to the teachers: Mr. Randal Overton of Rensselaer, and Miss Gertrude Taylor of Wolcott. They highly appreciated the compliment. In the afternoon the audience was favored with vocal and instrumental music, also dialogues and recitations which were received to the immense delight of all and deserving of much credit both to teachers and scholars. Space will not permit of special mention for all but as a true compliment the characters were all strongly drawn, the program well rendered. In general the pupils acquitted themselves with credit. A number of strangers were present B. Corner trustee and a former teacher, was present and expressed himself as being highly pleased with the progress of the school, he also favored us with a recitation.

War is at Hand! The Resolutions are Signed.

Army and Navy Ready for Quick Work when they are ordered to Strike in Cuba's Behalf.

TROOPS RUSHED SOUTH.

General Miles Will take Command in Person of all the Operations of the Military Arm of the Service.

Washington, D. C., April 20.—There has not been such a day in Washington since 1861. Yet a stranger who dropped down without knowing the situation and the intentions of the government would not have noticed any difference in the appearance of the city or the public buildings. The only place where there was anything more than the usual activity was at the navy department. There everybody is working long hours, and the additional clerks required by the press of business have filled the offices to overflowing. At the white house there were a good many tourists, and a number of congressmen called during the day. By a curious coincidence Mr. Elkins, who has been one of the most conservative, and Mr. Cannon, who has been one of the most radical senators on the Cuban question, happened to meet in the president's office at 11:22 o'clock, when the latter signed his name to the official parchment copy of the Cuban resolutions.

Almost immediately afterward one might say simultaneously a copy of the resolutions was sent by Edward Savoy, the colored messenger at Judge Day's office, to Senator Polo at the Spanish legation, who received for the document informally upon the envelope, which Savoy retained as a precious memento. Senator Polo was awaiting the message in company with Mr. Cambon, the French ambassador; Mr. Hengelmueller, the Austrian minister, who have been his nearest friends. His passports were sent from the state department about 4 o'clock.

It is evident that the Spanish minister does not expect a long war, for he has decided not to return to Spain, but has engaged rooms at Suspension Bridge, where he can observe everything that is going on in this country without being in our territory or jurisdiction. The secretaries and some other members of the staff will also go to Suspension Bridge and afterward to Toronto.

The ultimatum was given to the telegraph operator about 11:30 a. m. which would be about 4:30 p. m. Madrid time, and the president hopes that Gen. Woodford will be able to deliver it this evening. As soon as he acknowledges the receipt the documents will be given to the press. It is understood that no formal note is addressed to the Spanish government. Gen. Woodford was simply instructed to hand to the minister of foreign relations a copy of the resolutions passed by congress and to say that he is instructed to express President McKinley's confidence that the demands therein contained will be complied with by Saturday noon next, in order that the latter may be relieved of the necessity of carrying out the directions contained the third section of the resolutions.

A proclamation by the president calling out the state militia is all prepared and ready for his signature, but he does not wish to issue it until congress passes the bill now pending for the reorganization of the militia. He sent several messages to Representative Hull today urging immediate action on that measure.

At the quartermaster's department to-day bids were opened from steamship companies for carrying troops to Cuba, which looks like business.

Rensselaer Hopeful Too.

The Rensselaer Republican publishes a letter from Dr. Matchette of Bourbon, secretary and treasurer of the proposed electric road, which is here given for what it is worth. It is dated Apr. 16th:

"The line has not yet been located, nor will it be on any route until our new executive committee has had an opportunity to fully canvass the surveys and the advantages of the territory through which these surveys have been made and then the right of way must be fully secured on the route, before the location is made, or at least a positive guarantee of all of it made, before any route is made acceptable.

Our construction company have everything in shape to begin actual work of construction of road within a week from date of location of the line, and will push it rapidly to completion. Your people and your paper have many friends with our company. Be encouraged and work.

A. C. MATCHETTE."

U. S. Weather Bureau's Weekly Crop Bulletin.

The weekly crop bulletin for northern Indiana, issued by C. F. R. Wappenbrans, section director, at Indianapolis, is as follows:

Warmer, sunny weather during the day and light local rains on Wednesday and Thursday were favorable to farm work and crops; in the counties near the lakes it is too dry and rain is needed. Wheat improved rapidly and looks well; rye is starting well; young clover is recovering from the evil effects of the late frosts; vegetables are doing well. Tree fruit peaches, apricots, plums, cherries, apples, etc., were not much injured by frost and are getting into bloom; small fruit is doing very well. Oats are all sown nearly everywhere, they started well and many are up and doing well. Pasture and meadows are getting in good condition rapidly and stock will soon be turned into pasture. Field pea planting progressed. Many potatoes were planted; many gardens were made. In general farm work advanced more rapidly; much corn ground was broken, and plowing progressed well.
