GET READY FOR THE WORK.

The Warsaw Republican of recent date in an article relating to the success of the democratic party in the campaign of 1830, hit the nail squarely on the head. It expresses the opinion of the STANDARD in such a clear forcible manner, that we copy the article in full.

"Everything at present points to the defeat of the democratic party in the presidential contest next year. But it will not do for republicans to be over confident. They have a vigilant and an unscrupulous enemy to contend with, and the restoration of the democratic party to power means much more than at first sight might be supposed; much more than they are willing to admit. In fact were the leaders of the party to explain the aims and objects they have in view, they could muster but a slim following in the northern states."

"They cannot deny that the triumph of the party means the restoration of power to the south; for the representatives in congress from the states lately in rebellion, have already made known what they expect in return for their support of the party—which is nothing more nor less than a controlling voice in the affairs of the nation. A restoration of national power to the south, would be followed by the restoration of all that she lost by the rebellion, and the repudiation of the national debt."

"We know that this view is ridiculed and laughed at by democrats, but the actions and arguments of southern politicians during the past two years, show that such a purpose is held in reserve and only awaits the fitting opportunity to be boldly proclaimed. The Denver Republican has very clearly expressed our views upon this subject. It says: 'We do not believe that the south feels very kindly toward debt, which was incurred to whip it out of rebellion and into the ranks of the union. The leading men of that section still call that rebellion a patriotic struggle for their rights. Besides, the cities, counties and states of the south have gone into the repudiation of their own debts by wholesale. That repudiation reaches the enormous aggregate of three hundred million dollars. This amount is not repudiated because the people are unable to pay, but because they are unwilling. When repudiation of its own just debts is so popular and successful in a community, the inference is, that it would refuse to pay a debt contracted for its oppression and conjugation. It must also be borne in mind that the section which refuses to pay its state obligations is the section that exalts the character and sovereignty of the State at the expense of the Federal government. Men who will not acknowledge the binding obligation of a just local debt will throw overboard the national debt the first opportunity. But there is still another aspect of the case. There is a large party in the north standing ready to join hands with their southern friends in this very work. To sponge out the national debt by refusing to pay it, is a hobby to-day with thousands of northern democrats. Some take a roundabout way and propose to pay off the debt in greenbacks that are never to be redeemed in coin, but they all bring up at the same point. For reasons of policy the national debt is not openly attacked by southern politicians, but once in power and they would toss it aside, on one pretense or another. If the democracy could kill out and bulldoze the republican party in the nation, as it has in the south, our national bonds would not sell for ten cents on the dollar. The south of itself is weak, but it can always count on great assistance from the northern doughfaces.' Every man who has watched the course of political events since the democrats secured a majority in congress, knows that every movement that has been made by the rebel brigadiers, clearly indicates their purpose in this matter. It is therefore necessary that those who would preserve the credit of the nation, and who would not see all the fruits of the rebellion sacrificed, should be on their guard. Republican clubs should be organized in every school district, republican literature should be freely circulated, and every republican voter should be at work, nor cease their efforts until victory has perched upon their standards."

Judge F. C. Beaman, of Michigan, who was recently appointed by Governor Creswell to the United States Senate, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Chandler, has declined, and ex-Governor Baldwin, of Detroit, appointed in his place. Mr. Baldwin is a gentleman of considerable ability, has had large experience in political affairs, and his appointment is received with much satisfaction by republicans everywhere.

Michigan City Enterprise: It looks death-like to the democratic majority in Congress to see Dr. Felton, Alex Stephens and one or two others of the Southern members deserting or threatening to desert the party. There are indications that some of the southern states are ripe for revolt against the rule or ruin policy of the northern democracy. It is time.

ADVICE TO INDIANA REPUBLICANS.

We wish to impress on the Republicans of Indiana the importance of avoiding mere local and side issues between now and the general election next year. It is true that this is included in the general policy of preserving harmony in the party, but we wish to make a particular impression on this point. We wish to state some of the reasons for bringing this matter to the attention of republicans at this time. It is hardly necessary to remind our readers that the election next year will be one of great importance to the state and nation. Besides a Governor, State officers and Legislature, there will be members of Congress and President and Vice-president to be elected. The interests of the state and, to a certain extent, of the nation will be involved in the election. The control of the national Congress and executive, in other words, of the national government itself, will be in issue. The great question whether the policy of the government shall be shaped for years to come by the republican or the democratic party, by northern or by southern influences, by progressive or by reactionary ideas, by liberalism or by bourbonism, will be decided next year. But the election will not only be one of great importance—it will also be exceedingly close. It requires no gift of prophecy to foresee this. It is hardly possible to conceive of any change in political circumstances which will materially alter this condition. The national election is bound to be close. As matters now look it may turn, and is likely to turn, on New York and Indiana. There is no probability that the democrats can succeed without carrying both of these states, and the loss of either will be the loss of the election. In other words, the prospect is that New York and Indiana will be the battleground next year, and the latter state as much as the former. The democratic managers recognize this state of facts and are ready to meet it. In all their plans and calculations they concede the necessity of carrying New York and Indiana. This is the touchstone which is applied to every ticket presented, and will be the one used in the democratic convention. Moreover, we have information that they have already commenced a quiet plan of operations in this state, by which they hope to weaken the republican ranks in particular localities, and by breaking our lines here and there materially lessen our aggressive strength. One of the means by which they hope to accomplish this is by drawing republicans into small local and side issues. This policy has already been commenced in some places, and will be continued. It is a shrewd game, and if Republicans are unwary enough to be entrapped, it may lose us the State and the Nation. We believe the Republicans can carry Indiana next year if they make a united and determined effort. We have got the "bulge" on the democracy now, and, if nothing occurs to change the drift of public sentiment between this and the election, we can carry it, provided there is harmony and unity in our own ranks. To this end, however, it is of the first importance that republicans everywhere throughout the State avoid being drawn into small side issues of any kind. The national issues and interests involved are too important for mere local ones to find any place in next year's election. Let them be postponed till another year. If they are of any importance they will keep, and if they won't keep a year longer they had better die anyhow. The main thing, the point of first and last importance which we would impress as strongly as possible on republicans throughout the State, is to work towards absolute harmony in the party, and to this end to keep constantly in view the great interests involved in next year's election, and under no circumstances to be drawn into mere local, personal or side issues.

In this connection we will offer a word of advice on another point akin to the foregoing. We advise Republicans everywhere to nominate by conventions and not by primary elections. The latter mode of nominating candidates is objectionable on many accounts, but it is enough to say that it has proved a great injury to the party in localities where it has been tried for a succession of years. There are counties in this state where large republican majorities have been gradually frittered away through the undermining influence of primary elections. As a rule, tickets made in this way are not as good as those made in convention, and the after results are always bad. The convention system may not be perfect, but it is decidedly better than primary elections, which ought to be and we trust will be done away with everywhere hereafter.—[Indianapolis Journal.

Warsaw Republican: There is no difficulty in assigning a few enterprising editors to their true position in the journalistic field, when they manifest their ability to do dirty work by casting dirt at the memory of the late Senator Chandler. With all their slurs and libels his record will be none the less bright; for people are apt to remember that it is only the most worthless cowardly cur that yelps at a dead lion. A manly man respects the memory of a dead enemy, for the manly qualities he possessed, while the grave hides his faults.

From "THE MYSTIC SHOWERS," a paper read before the Literary Society at its anniversary Thursday evening, we make the following selection:

POETRY.

BY ONE OF THE MYSTICS.

Thanksgiving which sounds like a prayer,
But tastes like a Turkey cooked brown,
Is stalking abroad, very wily,
Throughout all our country, and town.
It looks like a mingling of people,
Of fasting, of church, and parade.
The fragrant with odors of cookies
And cakes that our mothers have made.
The spiced with the pies of rich pumpkin:
The scented with cranberry sauce:
The seasoned with deluge and jellies,
And dippings of saccharine frost.
The warmed with bright fires, and friendships:
The cooled with by want, and by slight
From those who might render us happy,
In sorrow, or poverty's night.
Of days that are fled 'till we find us,
Of scenes, and familiar arrays,
And tears for a lost one may blind us
On this anniversary day.
Thanksgiving—for what are we thankful?
For life, and for Heaven's free air.
For hope of a brighter hereafter
In that land beyond sorrow and care.

MASTER'S SALE.—By virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the United States Circuit Court for the District of Indiana, I will, on Tuesday, the 16th day of December, 1879, between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M., at the court house door in Rensselaer, Jasper county, Indiana, offer for sale at public auction the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following described real estate situated in the county of Jasper and state of Indiana, to-wit:

The northeast quarter, the north half of the southeast quarter and the southeast quarter of the southeast quarter of section number twelve (12), township number twenty-seven (27) north of range seven (7) west, containing two hundred and eighty (280) acres, and upon failure to realize a sum sufficient to satisfy the demand, I will, at the same time and place, and in like manner, offer for sale the fee simple of the same.

I ordered to be sold as the property of Elijah M. Tyner and Thomas Story at the suit of Jonathan Edwards, trustee, vs. Elijah M. Tyner and others, to be sold for cash, as lands are sold upon execution, without any relief from valuation or appraisal laws, subject only to statutory redemption. WILLIAM P. FISHBACK, Master in Chancery. Chase & Chase and F. W. Chase, Solicitors. Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 17, 1879. 23-31. P's fee $7.00.
