"REMEMBER THE MAINE."

Every important reform in this country since the birth of the Republic has been brought about by that party.

The first real conflict of the war occurred before Manila yesterday morning. It is evident from the meagre news received altogether through Spanish sources that Commodore Dewey inflicted a crushing defeat on the Spanish fleet at that point.

Now for Cuba. A stroke there such as Commodore Dewey made at the Philippines will practically end the war. Pressure from the powers will probably compel Spain to capitulate as soon as her hold on Cuba and the Philippine islands has been lost.

MAJOR CHARLES T. DOWDY died at Anderson Saturday evening and will be buried there Wednesday. He was one of the most enterprising and nervy business men of the state, and accumulated a large fortune. He was one of the organizers of the Richmond natural gas company.

In the celebrations, all over the country, of General Grant's birthday last week one of his most conspicuous characteristics was alluded to by nearly all the speakers. It was his unwavering fidelity to friends and his faith in the necessity of organization to accomplish great ends. His nature was exactly the opposite of that of the mugwump.

We feel very confident that no Republican who votes the straight ticket tomorrow will have occasion to regret his action. In nine cases out of ten Republicans who have bolted fairly made nominations of the party have regretted it. Those who have not regretted it have generally gone squarely over into the Democratic camp and remained there.

THE PALLADIUM supports the nominations of the Republican party, not because it always gets its choice, but because it believes that the principles of the party are worth sustaining and that they can only be sustained by maintaining the ascendancy of the party. It is by local inroads that the Democratic party hopes to win a general victory in this state and in the nation. That would mean Bryanism, free trade and other calamities to this country too numerous to mention.

Yellow Jaundice Cured.
Suffering humanity should be supplied with every means possible for its relief. It is with pleasure we publish the following: This is to certify that I was a terrible sufferer from Yellow Jaundice for over six months and was treated by some of the best physicians in our city and all to no avail. Dr. Bell, our druggist, recommended Electric Bitters, and after taking two bottles I was entirely cured. I now take great pleasure in recommending them to any person suffering with this terrible malady. I am gratefully yours, M. A. Hootz, Lexington, Kentucky. Sold by A. G. Lukens, druggist.

CAMP MOUNT.

A VISIT TO INDIANA'S MOBILIZATION POINT.

An Enormous Crowd Visits the Camp from All Parts of the State. A Description of the Camp and Camp Life—Accidents.

The world's fair at Chicago in 1893, with all its wealth of architecture and dazzling whiteness, was grand; but Camp Mount, the city of tents and the temporary home of Indiana's brave young soldiers, who are just beginning to learn what hardships are before their great march to the south in defense of their country against Spanish tyranny, is a grander sight still, and an attempt to give anything but a general idea of the place would prove a flat failure. To appreciate the scenes incident to real camp life in the service of Uncle Sam, one has only to go to Indianapolis and walk about the state fair grounds and take in the sights that are continually presented on every hand. Every drop of patriotic blood that one has is stirred to the boiling point, and enthusiasm is plainly shown on every face.

A VISIT TO THE CAMP.

A PALLADIUM reporter visited Camp Mount yesterday morning, and found everything in an unusual state of activity. The street cars to the fair grounds, but the camp is located, were entirely inadequate to accommodate the crowd who desired to take advantage of probably the last Sunday that the camp will be thrown open for public visitation. By 8 o'clock the masses began their mad rush for the camp and every outgoing street car was packed to the roof boards. Later in the morning, after some of the excursion trains began to arrive, the jam on the cars was something awful. The seats were filled three deep, and men hung on to the sides and both ends until the conductors could scarcely move to collect fares. Those who were unfortunate enough not to secure seats were bent in the shape of the letter S by the time they finally reached their destination. In the afternoon the people stood on Washington street, down town, and waited the entire afternoon for a car to come along that they could get on, and even then, some were obliged to stay away altogether. The crush of people in the evening was more than all the street cars in Indianapolis could have conveniently handled and not until long after dark were the grounds cleared of the rabble.

THE GENERAL VIEW.

The sight upon entering the camp in the morning about 9 o'clock was interesting and impressive and one never to be forgotten. Great lines of blue coats were seen as far as the eye could reach, undergoing daily regimental inspection by the colonels of the respective regiments. Splendid order prevailed and the inspecting officer proceeded slowly down the long lines, the rifles were presented, the cartridge chamber carefully examined by pulling back the small lever, snapped back again and returned to the men. Following this in a number of the companies, the men put through a short drill, after which the guns were "stacked" and the hour for "church call" patiently waited. At 10:30 o'clock the roll was sounded and the Second Regiment men formed in lines and solemnly marched to the large grand stand where services were conducted by Chaplain Carstensen, of St. Paul's Episcopal church, Indianapolis. A number of the companies had services at other points about the grounds conducted by their own chaplains or invited ministers from the city. To some of the boys, attending church services was a decided pleasure, while for others it had the opposite effect. One in battery A, Indianapolis light artillery, said that he had not been to church for fifteen years and if he went that had been sent from some comfortable place in his home. During the forenoon of last week the provisions at the camp were rather scarce, but those soldiers who were loudest in complaining of dereliction in the quartermaster's department at that time are now extolling in praising the manner in which that office is providing for the inner soldier. The quantity of the food is sufficient to satisfy all, and the quality is excellent and above condemnation. The medical officers are discouraging the thoughtfulness of parents and friends who are sending pastries and other light food to the camp and the men will be trained to live on very plain but wholesome diet, and this training will very materially lessen their hardships and home-sickness when they reach the seat of war.

SEVENTY-FIVE THOUSAND VISITORS.
In the afternoon the crowd was immense and was estimated at the Indianapolis News headquarters to be between 50,000 and 75,000 people, counting the soldiers already there. The following was the order of the program and it was carried out as far as was practicable:

First sergeants' call, 12:30 p. m.
Recall for regimental drill, 3:30 p. m.
First call for brigade formation, 4 p. m.
Drill call, 4:35 p. m.
Assembly, 4:40 p. m.
Adjutants' call for formation of battalions, 4:45 p. m.
Adjutants' call for formation of regiments, 4:55 p. m.
To the colors, 5:05 p. m.
Mess call, 6:20 p. m.
The wanted singing in the choir. A large number of the men, by the way, have excellent voices and their singing of the favorite hymns added much to the pleasure of the day.

Hood's Pills

the interest of the "inert," as some of the boys with Quaker blood called it.

THE DINNER HOUR.

After the services the troops marched back to their respective quarters with a brisk tramp, tramp, tramp; dinner hour was approaching and "that empty feeling" required immediate attention. The meat, potatoes, coffee, etc., were soon boiling in the huge iron pots and wash boilers, and when the dinner hour finally arrived short work was made of the "grub," by which name the provisions commonly are called. The following was the bill of fare yesterday: a given out by the quartermasters:

Fresh beef—half.
Bacon—half.
Hard bread.
Rice.
Hominy.
Coffee.
Tea.
Sugar.
Vinegar.
Salt.
Pepper.
Potatoes.
Onions.
Cabbage.
With many of the men, however, the above bill of fare varied, for the friends and relatives of the boys brought great baskets filled to the top with chicken, sliced ham, slaw, cake and other appetizing morsels which are a rarity in camp life. They were liberal and those who were less fortunate were given one of the "dram sticks" of a big fat chicken.

(Concluded Tomorrow.)

THE WAR MEETING

WAS A SUCCESS IN THE LONG RUN.

Though the Street Demonstration Was Slightly Visible to the Naked Eye, The Speeches and the Signing of the Muster Roll—Almost Enough Names—The New Company's Chorus.

The meeting at the Phillips on Saturday evening grew into a success out of very scant promise. In spite of the efforts of the leading spirits in the movement, the street demonstration was the ghostliest sort of a flizzle. After delaying the procession for half an hour beyond the allotted time, the pageant consisted of the haremback riders, some fifteen in number, the bugle corps, the drum corps, four men on horseback and a band. A few boys followed, but they were scarce. The streets on either side were packed with people, a little larger crowd than usual on Saturday nights, and that was all. If there was any enthusiasm it was successfully hidden. Not a flag, except a few tiny Cuban banners carried by boys, was visible to indicate whether the procession was American, Prussian or Chinese. It was the sort of a procession that makes the enemies of Richmond say "I told you so!" and was therefore the more to be regretted. There may have been some fault in the management of the parade, but that does not matter. The men who were getting it up did the best their limited time would allow, and the people should have done the rest. Had there been more organization, more formality, there might have been a better turnout. The line of march that had been published was not adhered to, but was taken directly out Main street from fourth, returning to the Phillips one house.

THE MEETING.

The stage was simply but beautifully draped with flags, the principal ornamentation being one huge flag suspended at the back of the stage. The people filed in about 8 o'clock and filled the grand part of the hall. The parquet was full and the balcony was almost taken, while only a few were in the gallery. A full three-ring circus fifty feet from the Main street could not draw the thousands of Saturday fare. Yet a goodly number found time to attend a patriotic meeting, though they were crowded on the streets to have filed Tomlinson hall at Indianapolis five or six times. Many of those on the streets had cited the President for not declaring war sooner, but did not find time to attend the meeting that meant business. Many of the audience were gray bearded men who had attended the war meetings prior to the civil war. Yet many others, young bloods who were actually patriotic, so patriotic that, while not having Uncle Sam needed much help to whip Spain, were ready, nevertheless, to go into training and be ready if the country should indeed demand their services.

After some selections by the bugle corps, the band under the leadership of Professor Coffin played "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," the sweet strains of America producing the first apparent enthusiasm of the evening. Mayor Ostrander then made a brief introductory address, stating the object of the meeting. Wayne county had been left out, in the first gathering of troops, on account of her having had no military organization. He spoke of the country's patriotism, and incidentally gave some illustrations of military discipline and the lack of it. He then called on John W. Tingle, who spoke briefly, but patriotically, and with enthusiasm. He said that Richmond could produce a regiment, if necessary. He was enthusiastically greeted.

R. E. Kirkman then spoke briefly and in a spirited way, telling of his visit to Camp Mount, the needs of the time, and of the duty of the young men to respond, now that the time for argument had passed and the time come for definite action against the oppressors of humanity. Considerable fire was roused by his speech.

C. E. Ward of Fountain City was called on for an original song, and he sang "Cubanized parody on 'Marching Through Georgia.'" Those who were looking the other way knew it wasn't Melba who was singing, as persons who have heard both vocalists noticed the difference at once. However, there were hits in the words that made the crowd wake up as they had been asleep before during the evening, and Mr. Ward deserves sincere thanks. He had to sing part of it over again.

W. D. Foulke was then introduced, and he made the speech of the evening. He knows much of Spain and the Spaniard and has a particularly extended acquaintance with Cuba and Spain's other American ex-colonies and the country she originally conquered and lost. Before speaking of Spain, however, he took up Wayne county. In the late war Indiana was not excelled in loyalty by any state in the union, and when the silk banner was offered to the county for the quickest response to a call for volunteers, that prize came to Wayne county. He referred to the wonderfully effective Fourth of July oration of Oliver P. Morton at Cambridge City July 4, 1863, as one of the greatest patriotic speeches on record. "Spain has seen the light of our glorious lost patriotism in their struggle for wealth. We must show them that we can look after something higher. He recalled the words of Morton in 1861: 'The time has come when we are confronted with the solemn fact of war.' So long as the question was in the future there was room for doubt, there were reasons for delay and difference of opinion. Nobody that was confronted with a state of war was all of one opinion. This is not a time for party. There should be no party now. You know that I am an independent, somewhat of a radical, a mugwump (laughter), yet there should now be no independent, no Republican, no Democrat. (Loud and prolonged applause.) There should be no party, no tariff, no silver question."

The two flags—the stars and stripes, and the "banner of blood and gold"—were contrasted. The Spanish flag of yellow and red, and the Cuban flag of blue and white, were contrasted and the blood that has marked the trail where they have sought it. Spain's bloody and merciless career in her new world conquests was contrasted with that of the Pilgrim fathers, who came seeking not gold, but liberty of mind and conscience. He gave a brief and laudatory description of Cuba, enumerating some of its many advantages. Matanzas in particular was spoken of as a place.

And every prospect pleases.

The wiliness is not that of the Cuban, but of the Spaniard. He said there were some good Spaniards, but that the Spanish nation was essentially cruel and bloodthirsty. A number of quotations from Oliver P. Morton particularly applicable to the present time, were given. "He, being dead, yet speaketh. The spirit of the great governor rules today." The "heroism of Cuba in her previous ten years" was mentioned. After that Cuba was a good representation, but that means only two-sevenths of the power of Spain, not enough strength in the cortex to accomplish anything, and the Cuban captain-general has absolute authority—absolute and unlimited power over the life, liberty and property of the citizens of the island. The speaker fully endorsed the action of the President in all that he has done. "We must stand or fall together." Shall the banner country if it did fail to fill a company of 188 men? The county should always have a militia company. In that other county, where only two hundred men, 12,000 were asked for at first, and 12,000 were asked for. We should not do as was done in 1861—underestimate the extent of the fight ahead of us. The north thought the confederates could not hold the country. They thought one southerner could whip six or eight Yankees. In the end they found that both were good fighters. "Jake Abel: 'You bet.' Spain has brave soldiers, and will fight hard. Then complications may arise until we shall all be needed. We should be ready. What is there in life but to close it honorably?" The peroration of the address was fine. The audience was worked up to a pitch of real enthusiasm at the masterly and eloquent address.

Mr. W. H. Smith then stated the object of the meeting and presented the muster roll.

Eugene O'Connell then burst forth with an impassioned and stormy recitation of "Barbara Frietiehe." That settled it and the boys were ready to go to war. Some seventy signed the muster roll. That made the

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure

Cures a Prominent Affection.

M. R. C. PHELPS, the leading pension attorney of Belfast, N. Y., writes: "I was discharged from the army on account of ill health, and suffered from heart trouble ever since. I frequently had fainting and smothering spells. My form was bent as a man of 81. I constantly wore an overcoat, even in summer, for fear of taking cold. I could not attend to my business. My rest was broken by severe pains about the heart and left shoulder. Three years ago I commenced using Dr. Miles' Heart Cure, notwithstanding I had used so many patent medicines and taken drugs from doctors for years without being helped. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure restored me to health. It is truly a wonderful medicine and it affords me much pleasure to recommend this remedy to everyone."
