The Great Medicine that Gives Nerve Strength

Hood's Sarsaparilla Makes the Blood Rich and Pure, Creates an Appetite and Restores Health, Vigor and Vitality.

"I feel that I ought to write a few words in praise of Hood's Sarsaparilla, which has done great things for me. I was in a delicate condition and was sick at my stomach and constipated. I tried remedies highly recommended for female weaknesses, but the medicines brought on other troubles. I was so weak I could not attend to my household duties, and I then determined to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. After I had taken this medicine a short time I began to gain strength."

Grew Stronger Each Day

until I was able to work all day without any inconvenience. I have taken Hood's Pills for constipation, and I am better today than I have been for five years. Since taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and Hood's Pills I feel rested in the morning. I am less nervous and am sure I look richer and purer blood. I have always been bothered with scrofula, but now I am rid of it. Before my last child was born I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and my child was fat and strong, while my other child was not well and lived to be only two years old." Mrs. E. E. DEAL, Box 419, Missouri Valley, Iowa.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Every day brings from one to a half dozen reports of wages being raised by factories at different points throughout the country. These are McKinley times.

Hon. Henry U. Johnson arrived home yesterday evening. He was warmly greeted by our people to whom his face has been familiar from boyhood, without reference to his course in congress.

Reports continue to come of Admiral Dewey's failing health. There is no doubt some truth in them. The President has informed him that he could take a rest any time. Thus far Dewey has declined to leave Manila. A great ovation awaits him when he does come home.

Yesterday John D. Ross, a painter, sued a contractor and the city of Indianapolis for damages because he had been discharged on account of not being a member of the painters' union. The law prevents the discharge of an employe on account of membership in a union, and the attorneys for Mr. Ross claim that the rule must work both ways.

Push the electric lines. Richmond must have them. The people along the proposed routes want them and want them very much. Traction lines at other points are growing in popularity. The business men in the towns and cities entered by these roads, and the people along the lines wonder now how they ever got along without them.

A walk along north E street in the manufacturing quarter will convince any one that Richmond manufacturers are feeling the business boom. They are full of orders and full of hands. Many of them are away behind orders and cannot possibly catch up. Some are experiencing much difficulty in getting raw material, especially in the iron line. A Richmond manufacturer was in Pittsburgh the other day purchasing material. He found the hotels crowded with western manufacturers who were on the same mission. All had trouble in getting orders filled. Verily, these are McKinley times.

At Indianapolis yesterday the state board of education opened bids for arithmetics, geographies and copy books to be furnished for a period of five years for use in the public schools of the state. There were thirteen bidders. The board, after receiving and tabulating the bids, decided to defer action until April 12, when the contract will be awarded. The law passed in 1889, which first established in Indiana the open competitive system of awarding contracts for uniform sets of text books, fixed the maximum of price to be charged for arithmetics, geographies and copy books as follows: Elementary arithmetic, 35 cents; complete arithmetic, 45 cents; elementary geography, 30 cents; complete geography, 75 cents; copy books, 5 cents each. Most of the bids were below the above figures, and some of them much below. So it is certain that the state will not pay too much for its elementary school books.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dread disease that cannot be cured by medicine, but that it can be cured by the only cathartic cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Cathartic Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation on which the disease is based, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Gen. Miles' New Uniform.

Gen. Miles has adopted for his own uniform some new devices which add to the attractiveness of his official apparel. He has added gold embroidery to the sleeves and collar of the full dress coat. The design is a delicate tracery of oak leaves in gold. The familiar epaulettes have been abandoned in favor of the flat Russian coat, without fringe, bearing the coat of arms of the United States, and the two stars indicative of the rank of major-general. To this is added a belt of Russia leather piped with gold bullion and embroidered in oak leaves to match the design on the collar and cuffs of the coat. The new features of the uniform are completed by a band of alternate stripes of yellow and gold, which extends from the right shoulder to the left side.

CAPTAIN PHILIP.

When the yellow and red flag was pulled down on the Almirante Oquendo the commander of the Texas gave the order to his men: "Don't cheer, because the poor devils are dying."

—Evening Sun.

The victor looks over the shot-shattered wave.

At the given ship of his foe he looks brave

And the men in their life blood lying;

And the joy of conquest leaves his eyes.

The lust of fame and of battle dies,

And he says: "Don't cheer; they're dying."

Why leap our hearts at our Hobson's choice?

Or at his who batted his way to fame,

Our flag in the far East flies?

Our nation's spirit these deeds reveal—

But none the less does the spirit peer

In the words: "Don't cheer; they're dying."

Cycles have passed since Bayard the brave—

Passed since Sydney the water gave,

On Zuthphen's red and white gave;

But the knightly echo has lingered far—

It rang in the words of the Yankee tar

When he said: "Don't cheer; they're dying."—Charles W. Thompson.

The secret service has unearthed another band of counterfeiters and secured a large quantity of bogus bills, which are cleverly executed and are so cleverly executed that they are almost indistinguishable from the genuine.

average person would never suspect them of being spurious. Things of great value are always selected by counterfeiters for imitation, notably the celebrated Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which has many imitators but no equals for indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation, nervousness and general debility. The Bitters sets things right in the stomach, and when the stomach is in good order, it makes good blood and plenty of it. In this manner the Bitters get at the seat of the strength and vitality, and restore vigor to the weak and debilitated. Beware of counterfeiters when buying.

A NAVAL TRAGEDY.

OLD-TIME CATASTROPHE RECALLED BY THE MAINE DISASTER.

The Bursting of a Gun on the Princeton More Than a Century Ago Scattered Death and Destruction—President Tyler's Narrow Escape from a Horrible Fate.

The destruction of the warship Maine recalls a fearful tragedy in United States naval history, in which the Secretaries of State and the Navy and other persons were instantly killed, many were wounded, and the President and several prominent statesmen and high officials had extremely narrow escapes from death.

This catastrophe occurred fifty-four years ago, on the afternoon of February 28, 1844, on board the United States war steamer Princeton, Commodore Stockton, on the Potomac River, about fifteen miles below Washington.

It was the Peace-maker, one of the larger guns of the ships armament, a new and to the commander a favorite piece of ordnance.

To exhibit the superiority of these new and formidable cannon Commodore Stockton had invited and received on board a large and brilliant company of both sexes for an excursion down the river. In this party were included President Tyler, Mrs. Robert Tyler, Miss Cooper, John Tyler, Jr., and several other persons of high official rank, Senators and Congressmen, attorneys and Secretaries of legation; Gen. Almonie, Minister from Mexico, &c., in all about 400 persons.

When the Princeton had fairly passed Fort Washington the Peace-maker was shot and fired, the effect of which proved its remarkable power, and won the admiration of all on board. An hour afterward, by request, the piece was loaded for firing a second time. The gun was now pointed to leeward, and behind it stood Commodore Stockton; a little to the left of him Mr. J. Washington Tyson, Assistant Postmaster-General. By the side of the latter, a little behind him, stood Mr. Strickland of Philadelphia, and a little to the right of that, behind him, Col. Benton of Missouri, who had a lady at his arm, and Judge Phelps, of New York, and Vermont. To the leeward of the gun stood Judge Uphur, the Secretary of State, and Gov. Gilmer, the Secretary of the Navy; and a short distance back from the gun, the Minister from Belgium. By the side of him stood the Hon. Mr. Gardner of New York and Commodore Kennon, chief of the Navy Bureau.

On firing the gun a murderous blast of smoke and shrapnel was hurled forward and a dense cloud of smoke enveloped the entire group on the forecastle; but when this blew away the scene was a shocking one. The Peace-maker itself to the view of the horrified and agonized spectators. The gun had burst at a point three or four feet from the breech, and scattered death and destruction all around!

The lower part of the gun, from the trunnions to the breech, was blown off. Secretary Uphur was badly cut over the eye and in his legs, and expired a very few minutes. Mr. Gilmer of Virginia—under whose official direction, as Secretary of the Navy, the power of this great gun was tested—was likewise dangerously wounded and soon breathed his last. Mr. Mayhew had his arm and one of his legs cut off. Mr. Gardner of New York—the future father-in-law of President Grant—was severely wounded. A very few minutes later, Commodore Stockton, who had been standing at the gun, was hurled back from where he stood just a moment before.

Col. Thomas Hart Benton, author of "My Thirty Years in the Senate," the father-in-law of President Grant, and one of the most noted men of the old regime, gives an interesting account of his own experience at the time of the explosion. Among other things, he says:

"Lieut. Hunt carried the gun to be worked, to show the ease and precision with which her direction could be changed, and then pointed down the river to make the fire, himself and the crew standing on the beach. I saw the hammer pulled back, heard a tap, saw a flash, felt a blast in the face, and knew that my hat was gone; and that was the last that I knew of the world for some time."

"The first that I knew of myself or anything afterward was of rising up, the breech of the gun, scattered all about myself, and I saw the Peace-maker itself split open; two seams, the food coming from their ears and noses, rising and swelling near me, and Commodore Stockton, hat gone and face blackened, standing bolt upright, looking fixedly upon the shattered gun. I had heard no noise, no more than the dead. I only knew that the gun had burst from seeing its fragments. I had gone through the experience of a sudden death, as if by lightning, which extinguishes all feeling and sensation, and takes you out of the world without thought or feeling. I think I know what it is to die without knowing it, and that a death is nothing to him that lives."

It is worthy of note that the Peace-maker was a new piece of ordnance, and that it was the first time it had ever been fired.

When soft poultry food is thrown on the ground or even on a board, it is quickly trampled and befouled so that it is unfit to eat. Especially is this true in a wet, muddy time. To be sure, it may be placed in a shallow pan or trough, but even this does not help the matter any. What is wanted, rather, is a covered pan or trough so constructed that it will permit the poultry to obtain the food and at the same time keep them out of it with their feet.

For small chicks make a double trough of tin, such as is shown in Fig. 1. Have it from two feet up to any length desired, and six inches wide, each half being three inches wide and 1 1/2 inches deep, with square ends soldered on. This gives the best action, as it can be easily washed and kept clean.

Make a box such as is shown in Fig. 2, and set the trough inside of it. Have this box, inside, of a length and width to correspond with the size of the trough, and let it be at least a foot high at the ends. It will take some work, of course, to construct the oval roof, but by rounding the end boards, or "peaks," and taking a thin but tough piece of board of the requisite size and steam it, and then nailing it on securely, no serious difficulties will be experienced. Have this part hinged and fastened with a hook, as is shown.

Each side should be open and fitted with wire bars placed two inches apart, and the ends of these wires being bent at right angles, driven through the strips of wood and clinched. To insert the food, simply raise the upper portion or roof part, the semi-rotundity of which prevents the fowls from roosting on it. Thus the poultry cannot get at the food with their feet to pollute it, and, at the same time, it is safe from any stray animals that may come along, such as cats and dogs, for which it is not intended.

There is no doubt that pullets are much more profitable as layers than old fowls. It is often wise to keep old hens because of their good qualities as breeding stock, when they are fine in color, shape, size, etc., but they are hardly ever profitable from the standpoint of the egg basket for market purposes.

It is often well, also, to keep some matronly old "biddies" that are reliable as mothers for chicks, for the pullets are apt to be "young and thoughtless," and will have a disposition to neglect maternal duties; but as layers simply, a pen of pullets is not very far from twice as productive as the same number of old hens, and on the farm where egg production is sought for, no hen should be kept longer than two years unless for some other reason than her egg production. Another point in connection with egg production should also be borne in mind, and that is that only winter production pays. The time may come, as it appears to be coming in dairying, when the prices for winter and summer will be more nearly equalized, but just now it is the winter egg that brings a price, while the summer egg does not.

The time may come, as it appears to be coming in dairying, when the prices for winter and summer will be more nearly equalized, but just now it is the winter egg that brings a price, while the summer egg does not.

though the cost of production in summer be small. Observation of these two points—pullets as layers, and more attention to winter production—will go far to make egg production profitable.
