OPEN LETTER.

In Which Some Plain Questions are Asked William J. Bryan.

RICHMOND, Ind., Oct. 5th, 1900.

Hon. William Jennings Bryan.

Dear Sir—In common with a number of my fellow citizens, I today listened to your address delivered in our city, and was sorry to note that owing to the delay in your arrival, you were compelled to so curtail your remarks as to omit entirely the giving of your views upon several important questions on which it is possible you intended to have spoken.

It is but fair to believe that a large number of the voters present desire to know your policy and would like to hear your ballot aid in placing you in the responsible office which you seek. They desire to know that your competitor for this high position has the advantage of many years of public life during which his actions speak louder than words of that which may be expected of him, while their confidence in what you may do must be based wholly upon your statements and promises, as that which you have done, even when occupying high position, is unrecorded.

Your statement set upon all questions which you discussed on Oct. 1896 you stood today upon the sand ground which you maintained was upon your part truly and the point, giving no uncertain sound, though it does seem strange in view of his history the past four years that you should continue to hold your position in the public eye.

It is but an ordinary place, either.

It is beautiful in bush and external appearance, and absolutely safe.

It works on the hydraulic principle, has direct lift, is not supported by cable, is held in place by water alone, and can not be destroyed.

There are 11,250 square feet of floor space, and both day and night in the entire establishment.

The lower floor is magnificently lighted by daylight and its most satisfactory substitute, electricity, while the second floor is a marvel of airy brightness.

Both by day and by night the store is the lightest in the city. You can see the texture of everything you buy.

The entire store is equipped with the Barr cash and package carrying system, which, with the interior telephone system makes the greatest possible economy in time, which always has its advantage to the buyer

as well as to the salesmen.

The architectural beauty is accentuated by a grand open stately way, evidenced by a wide, open, airy, lighted atrium.

The second floor is a wonderful place.

The entire building is a wonderful place.
